Van Fleet Denies Tie-In Of Peace Talk, U.N. Halt

Calls War Speculation Merely Guessing Game

UNITED STATES EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, KOREA, June 3 (Sunday) (AP).—The U.S. Eighth Army commander said today there was no connection between the halt in the allied offensive and reports elsewhere of peace talks.

Lt.-Gen. James A. Van Fleet described as a "guessing game" speculation that the attacks were halted because of reported peace moves elsewhere in the world.

"All my reports are based on what has taken place on the battlefield, and what is taking place," Van Fleet declared in a statement.

"There is no connection between the trend of battle on the Korean front and any reported instructions from higher authority.

"There has been some conjecture in the press that my battle plan is tied in with a directive from top-level sources other than military.

"GUESSING GAME"

Last night Van Fleet told correspondents that the "pursuit phase" of the Korean war has ended. This appeared at the time to throw a smoke bomb of obscurity over the Korean battlefront.

He did it in the first two paragraphs of a statement distributed to correspondents at a news conference. These paragraphs said:

"The 8th Army pursuit phase has now ended with the clearing, again, of enemy units of South Korea—less those in the former border area west of the Imjim River.

"The 8th Army will continue, however, to stop the enemy's unwarranted aggression against the South Koreans, and will, when necessary and profitable, meet such threat within North Korea."

NO CONNECTION

In his new statement today he said:

"There is no connection between the trend of battle on the Korean front and any reported instructions from higher authority, other than military authority . . .

"Any statements I have made could not possibly be used as a justification for what I consider obvious speculation.

"The press has the privilege of speculation but the speculation is solely its own.

"Your guess—that of the press—cannot and should not be attributed to me.

U.K. Studying Possibility Of Ending War

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP).—The British embassy here has been instructed to take up with the State Department the possibility of reviewing the Korean situation to see whether there is some way of ending the conflict.

Diplomatic informants said it appears certain such a review will in fact be undertaken through the regular meetings held at the State Department here with representatives of all nations having armed forces fighting in Korea.

The fact that the Chinese Communists have been defeated in their big spring offensive is what makes a review timely, in the opinion of these informants. It apparently was what prompted Foreign Minister Herbert Morrison to send his instruction to the embassy.

The move, however, apparently comes without any active prompting from the Chinese Communists.

Secretary of State Acheson, testifying in the Senate hearings on the ouster of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as Far East commander, said that he did not know of "any proposals having been made by the Red Chinese."

The secretary testified also that he did not know of any present negotiations for peace in Korea.

He said the United Nations good offices committee is making continuous proposals but "none of these have been responded to by the Chinese."

Holiday Honors King

Allied All-Out Offensive Halts Along Korea Front

TOKYO, June 3 (Sunday) (AP).—The Allied all-out offensive ended Saturday but United Nations troops hacked away at growing Red resistance north of the 38th Parallel.

New censorship regulations—strictest of the war — were clamped down Saturday then eased slightly today to permit a trickle of frontline detail.

Almost all of South Korea was free of Communist troops. But an Eighth Army staff officer said large groups of Reds were moving southward toward the central front.

All along the front U.N. troops met stiffening Red resistance. At Yongong, north of the 38th Parallel on the central front 2,000 Communists began attacking last night and didn't withdraw until 1 a.m. today. The Eighth Army staff officer, however, described most of the enemy action as "stubborn, delaying action." U.N. gains were mostly under two miles.

The 8th Army commander, Lt.-Gen James A. Van Fleet announced Saturday that the "pursuit phase" of the "all-out offensive" was ended. Twenty-four hours earlier, U.N. Secretary General Trygve Lie had asked the Reds if they would agree to a ceasefire near the 38th Parallel. This led to some speculation that a peace move was under way.

Three Hurt When Cars In Collision

Three occupants of a car driven by J. H. Massey, Erie Street, Victoria, were taken to hospital following a three-car collision last night in Central Saanich.

Admitted to Rest Haven Hospital at Sidney with head injuries and shock, and later transferred to the Veterans' Hospital here was Dr. E. C. Whitehouse, about 70, of Brentwood.

His condition was described as satisfactory.

Massey was treated for a fractured rib at Rest Haven and later released, as was Mrs. M. Jacobson of Victoria, also a passenger in Massey's car, who suffered leg lacerations.

WHEEL TORN OFF

Central Saanich police chief V. J. Lawley said the accident occurred shortly after 8 p.m. when Massey's car, heading north on West Saanich Road, was in collision near Benvenuto Road with a two-ton truck driven in the opposite direction by Ronald Paul, R.R.1, Saanichton.

Force of the collision tore the left front wheel off Massey's car, causing it to swerve off the road, hit a telephone pole and collide with a car driven by Ann Cavenaugh, Saanichton, which had been following the truck.

Saanich police and R.C.M.P. from Sidney also attended the accident.

Charges would be laid, police said.

Up and over goes pole-vaulter Gerry Kenyon of Penticton, clearing bar at record 11 feet, 1½ inches during track meet to celebrate Victoria High's 75th anniversary. Same height was cleared by Douglas Davis of Maple Ridge, who was named winner because he made it with fewer misses. Kenyon set previous mark of ten feet, eight inches, in 1949.

Police Halt Street Fight

City police and naval shore patrol last night broke up a fight between a number of servicemen and what authorities termed "zoot-suiters."

The brawl broke out about midnight outside the Y.M.C.A. following a dance.

Police later took two large, heavy rings off the hands of one youth apprehended on Yates Street.

Last night's disturbance was believed to have been over an altercation which allegedly took place last week. Two youths were taken to the police station and later released.

Acheson Hints U.S. Willing to End War

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP).—State Secretary Dean Acheson hinted strongly today the United States is willing to halt the fighting in Korea at parallel 38 if there can be assurances of no further Red aggression.

He told Senators the U.S. Government might agree to a "real settlement that would accomplish the military purposes in Korea."

Then he explained further: "That is, if the aggression would end and you had reliable assurances that it would not be resumed, then you could return to a peacetime status and we would hope gradually to remove the troops from Korea, both Chinese troops and United Nations troops."

Acheson told the Senate armed forces and foreign relations committees studying the ouster of Gen. Douglas MacArthur that once the Chinese are convinced they can't defeat the U.N. forces then "you have a real possibility of working out a stable situation."

Senator Smith (Rep. N.J.) said "if we stop where we began" at the 38th parallel then he believed it would be difficult to justify the Korean war casualties.

Acheson replied: "Senator, if you accomplish what you started out to do, I don't think that is synonymous with saying you stopped where you began.

"We started out to do two things. One is repel the armed attack and the other is to restore peace and security in the area.

"Now, if we do those two things, we have done what we started out to do, and I think that is success."

OTTAWA, June 2 (CP) Fire was raging tonight in the Royal Canadian Army Ordnance depot in southwest Ottawa, which houses several million dollars worth of military supplies and equipment.

SEATTLE, June 2 (AP).—The second three-alarm fire in a month struck on Harbor Island, in Seattle's industrial area, tonight.

No Death Alley Action Yet Apparent; 100-Accidents in Year Is Forecast

In the next 12 months it is almost inevitable that about 100 accidents will occur on the "Death Alley" stretch of Island Highway leading into the city.

These accidents will take an equally inevitable toll in property damage, personal injuries and even lives.

From June 1, 1949, to May 31, 1950, were 111 accidents on the stretch from Craigflower bridge to Goldstream. From June 1, 1950, to May 31, 1951, the total was 89 accidents.

There were 195 cars involved in the 1949-50 accidents and the toll was 24 cases of property damage, 87 personal injuries. There were no deaths.

THREE DEATHS

In the 1950-51 period, 189 cars were involved. There were 74 instances of property damage and 23 personal injuries. Three deaths resulted from accidents during the period.

The fact that motor vehicle registrations increased 16.53 per cent in 1950 over 1949 would indicate that motorists are attempting to overcome the road hazard by exercising more caution.

R.C.M.P. officials say the provincial-wide increase in motor vehicle registrations means an even greater increase than the percentage cited in a densely populated area like Greater Victoria.

Aside from the announcement that a right-of-way was being purchased for an improved highway outlet, there has been no apparent sign of action by the provincial department of public works to improve the road.

ACCIDENTS PLOTTED

Accidents are carefully plotted on a route map to indicate danger points.

The plot shows the same pattern of danger on the narrow, twisting road. Trouble spots continue to develop at Thetis Lake corner, Helmcken Road and the Craigflower intersection.

The only bright spot is Colwood Corner, which was a point of extreme danger until a service station at the corner was moved back from the edge of the road.

R.C.M.P. traffic experts explain, however, that it is the narrowness of the road, not the curves, that causes accidents. On a curving stretch of road motorists cut speed and are more inclined to use caution. On the narrow straightways, demon speed holds the steering wheel.

Wage Offer Rejected

Chance of Strike Looms On B.C. Coastal Ships

VANCOUVER, June 2 (CP).—Possibility of a strike on vessels of three major coastal shipping firms increased today following a report that 800 employees have rejected the companies' latest wage offer.

If the rejection is confirmed, members of the Seafarers' International Union (T.L.C.)—who voted overwhelmingly to strike before the proposals were made—will walk off the Canadian Pacific, Canadian National and Union Steamships boats.

The report that the wage offer was rejected came from an S.I.U. circular.

The companies offered a monthly wage increase of $13.87, an hourly boost in overtime rates of 11 cents, a 40-hour week beginning January 1, and a cost-of-living clause.

Union officials said they had been informed that men on the job had not clearly understood the offer. For that reason, the circular continued, copies of the agreement were being submitted again so that everyone would know the exact terms.

Youth Guilty; Death Decreed

NEW WESTMINSTER, June 2 (CP).—Francis Stephen Sykes, 17, today was sentenced to be hanged for murdering a girl he had known since early childhood.

A 12-man supreme court jury convicted the youth of murder in the death of 13-year-old Laura Grant after deliberating about two hours. Mr. Justice A. M. Manson set September 11 as the date of the hanging.

Port Alberni Feels Tremor

PORT ALBERNI, June 2 (CP).—An earth tremor was felt tonight at this west coast Vancouver Island city.

The tremor felt at 10.58 p.m. P.D.T. Citizens said it lasted three or four seconds. There were no reports of damage. Telephone calls, some of them from out of town, jammed police and radio station switchboards.

Clerk "Dissatisfied"

Four at Campbell River Resign Village Positions

CAMPBELL RIVER, June 2.—Three members of the Campbell River village staff and the village postmaster have handed in their resignations, it was learned here today.

Officials who have quit their jobs are village clerk Richard B. Shaw; John Saville, building inspector, and Percy B. Allen, road and waterworks foreman.

The resignations coincided with that of postmaster Robert B. Walker, who is being replaced by D. B. McCarthy of Vancouver pending appointment of a permanent postmaster.

Reasons for the resignations were not known.

Speaking for himself, however, Mr. Shaw stated that he was "dissatisfied with the general set-up in village administration.

"I do not feel it is possible to carry on my duties in the way I would like to and should do," he said.

NO COMMENT

Mr. Shaw said he had come to Campbell River early in the year with a great deal of enthusiasm, but that things had not worked out as he had hoped.

The other two employees and commission chairman John W. Baikie were not available for comment.

Other commissioners said they had no comment to make at this time.

It is expected that the resignations will be discussed at a special meeting early in the week.

Power Project Being Studied

SHALALTH, B.C., June 2 (CP).—A hydro-electric power site on the Fraser River possibly the largest ever attempted in the world is being studied by British Columbia engineers.

The project calls for a dam several hundred feet high in a deep chasm of the Fraser at Moran, 170 miles northeast of Vancouver. It would develop 1,500,000 horsepower.

Public Works Minister E. C. Carson said today that engineers are now studying potentialities of the Fraser at Moran.

ALL ABOARD

By G. E. Mortimore

All's fair in fiction, and Hollywood has signed no contract to report history as it happened.

But one should point out that the movie-makers are not always reliable guides down the corridors of time.

I'm thinking of a production called "Rogues of Sherwood," which was screened at a Victoria theatre recently. It was a fine lively film in Technicolor, seething with action.

But Walt Disney could have done a much better job of it. If this little number had been a cartoon instead of a movie with real actors, everybody would have recognized it for a caricature of history.

* * *

Admittedly the Robin Hood story is 98 per cent legend and two per cent fact. It's a pretty tale, first-class raw material for the dream factory.

An authoritative reference book has this to say:

"What perhaps is its greatest interest is its expression of the popular mind about the close of the middle ages. Robin Hood was at that time the people's ideal, as Arthur is that of the upper classes. He is ideal yeoman, as Arthur is the ideal knight.

"He readjusts the distribution of property; he robs the rich and endows the poor. He is an earnest worshipper of the Virgin, but a vigorous hater of monks and abbots. He is the great sportsman, the incomparable archer, the lover of the greenwood and of a free life, brave, adventurous, jocular, open-handed, a protector of women."

Huzza for Robin Hood. It happens, though, that this film is about Robin Hood's son, a slick bow-and-arrow operator who seems to be fully the equal of Papa in leaping from trees and balconies and transfixing the King's men with shafts from 300 yards.

As far as I know, Robin, Junior, is a completely fictitious person. Considering that he never existed, he does tolerably well in this film. He plays a large part in banding the barons together and impelling King John toward Runnymede. And he manages to make off with the King's niece, a winsome girl who has been sending him messages by carrier pigeon.

In all these undertakings he is aided by most of his father's merrie men, who are older but still vigorous.

With a flaming arrow young Robin summons them back—Friar Tuck from a monastery, Allan-a-Dale from dalliance with a lady and Will Scarlett from the stocks, where he has been placed for poaching.

Robin and nearly all the merrie men speak with American accents. That's a curious thing, but not necessarily wrong. Shakespeare put Elizabethan English in the mouths of Romans, Danes, Venetians and other oddly assorted people. However, the makers of this film were no Shakespeares.

There is a definite flavor of horse opera to this film, abounding as it does in sudden attacks and cross-country chases. Nobody would have been much surprised if Friar Tuck had turned in his saddle and drawled: "We'll head 'em off at the gulch."

* * *

After all, however, this was low-budget movie, and by no means a new one. All the actors, including John Dereck as the boss of the Sherwood ranch, did a fair job with the material they had.

This film, and others of its kind, make passable entertainment for those who like to see colorful characters whooping through the woods. But let's not call it history.

Loss of Unborn Child in Vancouver Declared No Emergency After Study

A young Vancouver housewife was not an emergency case and the loss of her unborn child was not caused by her failure to be admitted to hospital immediately, Mr. Justice H. S. Wood has decided following a public inquiry.

"There seems to have been no ground at any time to suggest that there was any emergency in the sense described, although it [illegible] Mrs. Donald Ritchie should be in hospital," he said.

STUDIED REPORTS

The Supreme Court justice was appointed to hold a public inquiry to investigate press and other reports of the case.

The reports said that Mrs. Ritchie lost the child as a result of not being immediately admitted to hospital.

The inquiry was precipitated by the press and and by questions asked of Health Minister Douglas Turnbull in the Legislature by Arthur Ash (Cla.-Saanich).

NO BED

The inquiry showed that Mrs. Ritchie's physician, Dr. A. B. Greenberg, attempted to obtain a hospital bed for her on April 9 but was unable to do so for more than 24 hours.

The inquiry showed it was inevitable that Mrs. Ritchie would lose her unborn child, Mr. Wood reported, although it was an appropriate case for hospital care.

Mr. Turnbull commented: "I feel that this public inquiry has established the true facts and circumstances of the case and therefore has done a public service."

More Than 200 U.S. Publishers To Pay Brief Visit to Victoria

More than 200 United States newspaper publishers will visit Victoria briefly today.

They are delegates to the annual National Editorial Association convention being held in Seattle.

The association comprises 5,600 U.S. newspapers, 550 of them daily papers in every state in the Union.

After arriving on the morning boat from Seattle, the publishers will have lunch at the Empress Hotel, then visit Butchart's Gardens before taking a brief tour of the city and returning to the Seattle conference.

George I. Warren, managing secretary of the Victoria and Island Tourist Bureau, said that he expects that almost 300 publishers will take part in the Victoria visit.

Most of them will be writing articles that will stimulate tourist travel to the city, he said.

Macy's Determined to Keep Fighting As Consumers Cheer Big Price War

NEW YORK, June 2 (INS).—"No surrender!"

That was Macy's answer to competitors today after four days of the fiercest department store price war New York has seen in many years.

Said Richard Weil, Jr., president of Macy's in New York:

"We can keep this up forever!"

Weil stressed that Macy's had not intended to precipitate a price war. The store, he said, was merely reverting to its historic policy of selling for cash at 6 per cent less than its competitors.

But Macy's he added, was prohibited from pursuing that policy on items price-fixed by law until the United States Supreme Court's recent decision invalidating compulsory price-fixing.

"For the last 14 years a small segment of our assortment—less than 10 per cent of what we carry—was exempted by the law from the application of our 6 per cent policy," he said.

"Starting May 29 a segment of that 10 per cent became price-free. Day by day we hope to add to the number of items price-free. We can keep that up forever."

RETALIATION

When Macy's started cutting prices Tuesday, other large department stores retaliated and the war was on.

It is a war which has thousands of bargain-happy consumers storming the stores.

Weil made it clear that the choice of when the "war" ends is up to his competitors—

"We have never given up yet," he said stoutly. "We have no plans for giving up now.

"People frequently ask how we can do this and not go broke. Our store policy has been in operation for 93 years and we have not gone broke.

"If this is a victory for anybody, it is a victory for the consumer."

Nationalists Hoping For Attack

By SPENCER MOOSA

TAIPEH, Formosa, June 3 (AP)—Nationalist premier Chen Cheng today declared "we would welcome an attack" on Formosa "because it would give us the opportunity of inflicting a crushing defeat on the Reds."

The 54-year-old statesman said in an interview, however, that "the possibility of a Communist attack on this island is not great."

Chen said Nationalist resistance would be pressed on the Chinese mainland 100 miles away, despite the Red purge that had its effect on the open resistance of guerrilla forces.

"Most of the guerrillas," he confended, "will have to go underground, and infiltration be made from outside."

By this he meant that the infiltration will have to come from such Nationalist territory as Formosa and the few islands still free of Communist rule.

Chen, one of Chiang Kai-shek's right-hand men for more than 25 years, observed that "whether the Chinese Reds are going to attack or not we must make all preparations for defense."

Oddities

The temper of the oldest living Union veteran of the Civil War rose yesterday when he finally heard the two-day-old rumor that his doctor had ordered him to give up his habitual cigars.

Hard issued a statement saying that he "smokes as much as he pleases, and with the blessing of his doctor."

The "no smoking" rumor was attributed to the fact that Hard rode in the Memorial Day parade Wednesday without his usual cigar.

UXBRIDGE, Ont., June 2 (CP)—It was a long hike down the stairs, so Donald Lawrence, 19, and Dutch Asenault, 18, "didn't want to be bothered" carrying their suitcases. That was why they threw the bags out the hotel window, they said.

They'll be sentenced next week for leaving an hotel with the bill unpaid.

Girl Spies Train at "Factory" For Use With Secret Police

FLUSHING MEADOW, N.Y., June 2 (INS).—Existence of a Russian-run spy factory in Peiping, turning out hundreds of girl spies to fasten the Communist secret police grip over Asia, was reported today by Chinese sources.

The information came in a letter to relatives in the U.S. from a Chinese newspaperman forced to volunteer for Korea months ago. He was wounded and hospitalized in south China, from where he escaped to Macao, near Hongkong.

The letter describes in detail the experiences related to him by his girl friend in Peiping, who said she was forced to attend the spy school.

The espionage mill is located in the vicinity of the famous Peiping library, in the shadow of the former Imperial Palace.

MOSTLY CHINESE

The letter says that the girl "students" are mostly of Chinese nationality but there is a large sprinkling of young beauties from other Asiatic lands.

The eight-to-12-month curriculum covers every phase of espionage, and all girls are sternly warned at graduation against double-crossing the Peiping masters.

The bulk of the graduates fan out over China, spying on foreigners and natives alike. Their main job is to ferret out Communists not in sympathy with Moscow domination. Recent mass executions in China are attributed in the letter to the activities of spy school graduates.

They are now being posted all over China with the purpose of inveigling young men to volunteer for service in Korea.

Citizens Urge Industry Pay Hospital Share

MISSION, B.C., June 2 (CP).—A resolution proposing introduction of a Capital Gains tax and a special levy on industry to finance the British Columbia Hospital Insurance program has been passed by the Mission ratepayers.

The resolution, passed at a ratepayers' association meeting addressed last night by Mines Minister R. C. MacDonald, also asked for removal of co-insurance charges and suggested a share of the Federal subsidy to the province be set aside to help finance the hospital scheme.

Exchanges between Mr. MacDonald and some of the 300 persons attending highlighted the meeting.

The minister said he did not believe the scheme should be financed from general revenue. He said that many debt-ridden hospitals would have been forced to close had not the scheme been brought in.

Hatred Still There

Malik Gets Turn As Council Head

By PIERRE J. HUSS

FLUSHING MEADOW, N.Y., June 2 (INS)—Jacob Malik is back in the limelight today as June president of the U.N. Security Council.

Malik has lost none of the scowling hatred for the non-Communist world he exhibited during the fiery sessions of the Security Council last August, when he snarled traditional and legal procedure in that 11-nation body for the entire month by cracking the whip as president. Soviet delegate and spokesman for the North Korean Communists.

The chubby and round-faced Russian has lost weight since suffering from heart attacks last winter, yet he hangs on in U.N.

SKILFUL SWORDSMAN

At Austin's elbow again is Britain's verbal swordsman, Sir Gladwyn Jebb. Last August Sir Gladwyn was new at the game, having made his bow as Security Council delegate only in the preceding month.

Among others who stood up to Malik and are in the same seats this month are Yugoslavia's fiery-toned Ales Bebler and Sir Benegal Rau of India.

Francois Lacoste of France has replaced Jean Chauvel.

The other five men at the Security Council table this month are diplomatic sharpshooters from non-Communist lands — Turkey, Brazil, Ecuador, Nationalist China and The Netherlands.

Parliament Session In Autumn Probable

By TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA, June 2.—An autumn session of Parliament to begin late in September or early in October is now almost a certainty.

Barring a change of mind by the Government, Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent is expected to make the announcement shortly.

With business left over from the present session and more legislation to come, the new session would continue until close to Christmas.

NO CHANCE

There is not the slightest possibility of ending the present session by the end of June.

If additional legislation is brought down—and some of it is in the drafting stage—it would hold Parliament here until mid-August.

BUSY MONTH

To wind up the present session about the end of this month will keep Parliament very busy. Still remaining to be dealt with are most of the estimates, tax legislation arising out of the budget and a score of smaller items.

In addition, there is the new old-age pension legislation. If good progress is made in the next two weeks, the Government plans to introduce the legislation about June 20.

But if business now on the order paper is held up, the Government will wait until autumn.

Morning Paper Bought by Sun

VANCOUVER, June 2 (CP)—An agreement for purchase of shares of The News-Herald, Vancouver's morning daily newspaper, held by D. A. Hamilton, president, and of some of the shares of C. B. Delbridge, publisher, has been negotiated by The Sun Publishing Company Limited.

Although the purchase would constitute a controling interest in The News-Herald, no changes in management or policy will be made, Mr. Delbridge said.

The Sun Publishing Company announced that it will also offer to purchase the shares of other stockholders at the same price. Terms were not announced.

Pay Increase Offered B.C. Pulp Workers

VANCOUVER, June 2 (CP).—Wage increases of 16½ per cent have been offered to 5,000 pulp and paper workers employed by seven British Columbia firms.

The proposed contract, effective from July 1, for one year, will be voted on by members of the unions affected. It would provide minimum hourly wage increase of 20 cents, with other increases ranging up to 38 cents an hour.

Employees also would receive a cost of living bonus of one cent an hour for 1.3 points rise in the cost of living index over the June 1, 1951, figure.

SHORTER WEEK

The work week would be cut from 42 to 40 hours, the night differential would be increased from five cents to six cents an hour and the union shop would be granted.

Industry spokesmen said the wage boosts would cost between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

Firms involved are Alaska Pine and Cellulose, Bloedel, Stewart and Welch (Pulp Division), Columbia Cellulose, Howe Sound Pulp, MacMillan Export Company (Pulp Division), Pacific Mills, Limited and Powell River Company.

Reinforcements Going to Korea

EDMONTON, June 2 (CP).—The army anounced today that a 300-man reinforcement group for Canada's 25th Brigade in Korea will leave Wainwright military camp tomorrow for an embarkation port on the U.S. west coast.

The reinforcement group is the first to be sent since the brigade left Canada about two months ago.

Battle Action Call Comes at Last For Dashing, Impatient "Vandoos"

By BILL BOSS

WITH THE CANADIANS IN KOREA, June 2 (CP).—With startling dark eyes ablaze in a lean, ascetic head, the 31-year-old commanding officer almost barked:

"When in the devil ARE they going to let us fight?"

Lieut.-Col. J. R. Dextraze of Montreal, leading in Korea the 2nd Battalian of Canada's colorful Royal 22nd Regiment, clearly was impatient.

In the record time of ten days his unit had disembarked after a Pacific crossing, been reunited with its equipment, cleaned it, had a quick brush-up on training and hardening-up and set out for the front.

"They said they wanted us in a hurry," he said, "and here, after breaking our necks to get up here, we've been two full days waiting to get in."

IN ACTION

He and the 1,000 equally-impatient officers and men under him since have had their wish. The battalion, part of the 25th Brigade, went into action last week.

There was no denying that the Royal 22nd was fit and ready.

Major Robert Swinton of Vancouver, who speaks with all the prejudices of a former Seaforth Highlander, says: "It's one of the fittest battalions I've ever seen."

Swinton was lent by the Princess Patricias to pass along to the 25th Brigade the wrinkles picked up in Korea by the Patricias, who have been there since November. He also devised a company-scale exercise to underline the points and all companies in the Brigade were put through it.

Already, too, it was shaking down into a reincarnation of the second world war's "vandoos," sprouting the same dash, the same piquant blend of discipline and individualism, the same unit personality that distinguished its precursor.

NECKERCHIEFS

Everyone wears a neckerchief, for instance, and there hasn't been two alike in the unit.

The officers have a "battle scarf" in the regimental colors of blue, red and yellow—the blue predominating.

Canadians have a notable distaste for tin hats. The Patricias haven't used one in the line yet. In the line and out, it's beret by preference.

Some units use their green-brown camouflage veils as scarves and sweatbands. The Vandoos use them as headdress.

First-rate soldiers, with bandanas, scarves and riding crops flying, plus a few top-calibre operational surprises Dextraze has worked out for the benefit of the Chinese—the 2nd Battalion Royal 22nd Regiment was ready.

THE good wishes showered on Victoria High School in the celebration of its 75th anniversary have been wholehearted and sincere. To a unique degree this school has been the centre of Victoria's educational programs since 1876. Out of it was to grow Victoria College, for long on the same campus. Victoria High School has been more than fortunate through the years in the calibre of the men and women who have served on its teaching staff, and whose example, no less than their instruction, has left such an indelible mark upon successive generations of citizens. One has only to recall such names as Dr. E. B. Paul, Dr. S. J. Willis and Percy Elliott, to mention but few among many, to summon to mind all that is best in human character.

With Victoria High School, as with other worth-while institutions, it is difficult to know if the institution molded the character of the individuals who served it so long and so brilliantly, or if indeed the reverse was the case; men and women shaping a plastic thing into that form which was to give it endurance and lasting worth. Probably both the institution and its successive faculties reacted mutually on each other, until there came into being that standard of excellence which for decades the old school, in its changing edifices, has exhibited so strongly. Certainly there were "builders" on its faculty whose impress on the characters of their pupils will never wane.

Inasmuch as teaching is, and always will be, a leading out of what is inherent in the individual, these strongly marked qualities of leadership and character-building will likely remain the most important part of Victoria High School for a good long while to come. So the record has been, and so by every sign on the horizon it will remain. In honoring the school it is impossible to forget the men and women who remained friends and monitors of those whom they taught, from 1876 onward to the present day. They set a very bright example.

Korea, Not East Germany, Tells the Tale

NEXT week in East Germany another of Russia's interminable "peace" plebiscites will be held. There will be an impressive turnout at the polls, naturally, since the balloting age has been lowered to 16 and a menacing hint issued that a 100-per-cent vote is desired. The result will add nothing to either peace or the world scene in general.

The Sovietized East Germans will be asked if they are against remilitarization and in favor of a peace treaty for Germany. This is the sort of question to which any man would like to answer "yes." On its face alone that answer could be duplicated in practically any country. Peace is not what the Soviet Union is after, however, certainly not the kind that permits autonomy and freedom to others, and this plebiscite is merely another in the long list of deceits practiced by Moscow.

The result, a 100-per-cent "Ja" or something said to be close to that figure, will be broadcast to the world as evidence of the docile nature of East Germany and of its Moscow sponsors. The Soviet regime never tires of propaganda, even if one wonders sometimes whom it is they think they are misleading. The Hitlerian theory of the big lie told often enough finds its equivalent in the "peace" attitude posed without stint.

Were the Soviet Union really desirous of peace they could in all likelihood call off the Korean war tomorrow. This would be a gesture that would carry more weight than all the so-called peace plebiscites put together. It would, in fact, if unaccompanied by strings, be propaganda of the type the world needs today.

Tourist Traffic Uses Two-Way Street

IN terms of net gains in United States dollars, the tourist business does not bring nearly as much profit to Canada as many people seem to think it does. Last year American visitors spent an estimated $275,000,000 in Canada—an impressive total until one examines the other side of the ledger. In the same period Canadian tourists or visitors to other countries, chiefly the United States, took $226,000,000 out of the Dominion to spend elsewhere.

In actual fact, therefore, the tourist business last year was worth not $275,000,000, but $49,000,000—a large sum but by no means big enough for tourism to be treated as a major source of new revenue for Canada. When it is considered that the United States has a population ten times Canada's and that Canadians abroad spent almost as much as was brought in by traffic from across the border, there is reason to wonder if the Dominion is doing as much as it should to promote its attractions.

Early postwar conditions limited American holiday travel to this continent for the most part, with the result that business came this way without much effort on Canada's part. Times have changed. With the exception of those behind the iron curtain, there is scarcely a country in the world that is not making a strong bid for tourist dollars; and one has only to leaf through American illustrated magazines to appreciate the strong competition facing Canada.

To meet it, hackneyed pictures of red-coated Mounties and snowcapped mountains are not enough. The tourist bureaus in this country need to pull their socks up. They need some new and better ideas, for those handling the advertising campaigns of other lands are leaving them far behind by showing a much keener appreciation of the things that appeal to Americans with a desire to "go foreign."

TRAFFIC LIGHTS

Sir,—It is most confusing traveling east on Fort Street. The lights at Douglas are on the side, at Blanshard in the centre, at Quadra again on the sides and at Cook in the centre.

After Blanshard one naturally looks to the centre for the lights, and it's generally only till one is half-way across Quadra that he sees he is transgressing the law.

Also the light at Pandora and Blanshard should be altered to the centre, as it is most difficult to see the side lights at this point.

DESTRUCTIVE RACCOONS

Sir,—About the destruction of raccoons. I think this should be known: some months ago my hens were being killed at night. Hearing a noise I got up at 3 o'clock one morning and found a raccoon eating one of my hens. It was still alive.

Later on seven hens were killed in this district. I lost five hens, one Guinea hen and a pet snow goose I had had for twelve years.

If others had seen as I did two of my poor hens, still alive with all the lower part of the body eaten away, they would change their opinion with regard to the police destroying these pests.

A pheasant I found in the woods was also killed in the same way and other wild birds.

WOMEN AT WORK

Sir,—Reference was made recently in The Colonist to 'married women flooding the labor market today, notably to the extent of over 60 per cent. Various reasons for this condition are put forward, based on a magazine article in Macleans entitled "Why Married Women Are Going to Work." All reasons are evidently written by a working married woman.

I think the real fact is, actually that today's young marrieds want to start off with luxury standards of living and forego the responsibility of rearing children.

I also speak for thousands of middle-aged women who have no mate to support them; many of whom are breadwinners with sons or daughters, and who have to meet this unfair and cruel competition, and be on the losing side. Many are spinsters whose mates are in graves in Europe. They are forced to provide for themselves without assistance.

The ready employment of young married women (who have husbands to support them) by employers in preference to competent, experienced middle-aged women who, perhaps, cannot afford to look as glamorous, is working a severe and unjust hardship on this group of struggling women, who are becoming more and more depressed over their inability to meet unfair competition . . .

ELEMENTARY FIRST AID

Sir,—Your editorial referring to "teaching first aid in the schools" has merit and should produce effectiveness in many other directions as well as the schools.

May I suggest that the Government of British Columbia be approached to issue a pamphlet containing ideas such as "how to stop bleeding, how to apply dressings, what to do for burns and shock, the steps that should be taken to guard against infection."

As you so rightly say "every one should have training in at least the fundamentals of first aid."

The pamphlets suggested to be distributed to every office, store, factory, wholesale houses, every home and every place where there may abide a human being. They should be printed upon a sheet with glue on its back so that each one could be pasted in a prominent place and each person read and study it frequently.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

WITH some parched souls clamoring for the transfer of the old English "pub" to this fair city you'd never think, perhaps that a reformation is going on, and where you might least expect it—among the he-men.

I suspected something of the sort when watching a movie the other night — all about amateur sailors put in charge of a small United States warship. The bosun was a salt of the old school, well steeped in liquor as well as brine, and he was shocked beyond words when the crew came back from shore leave as sober as judges are alleged to be—in their duty hours—some of them, believe it or not, carrying ice cream!

The bosun, as you will appreciate, spat his disgust into the scuppers and almost embraced the one lonely roisterer returned under escort of the shore police. This was a real sailor, who fell flat on his face when unsupported and thus proved his he-manship. The milksops later proved their seamanship, but possibly this was an accident.

* * *

However, about the reformation. A news item from Baltimore, home of many a sailorman's spree, quotes a Sailors' Home official as saying the yen for strong drink is vanishing from the ships of his wide acquaintance. He may be making a wish father a thought but that's what he says, adding, "I'm tired of hearing about sailors who drink."

He has a point there. Some people talk their drink so much you'd think a glass and a pint was the acme of human attainment, when of course drinking is like swearing, as easily indulged in by a nitwit as by a genius and as common as the sole of your shoe. There's nothing distinctive about downing a couple.

Whether Canadian sailors are like their Baltimore cousins I wouldn't know for sure. I seem to remember, however, seeing an ice-cream machine aboard one of our local destroyers, and during the war they said the milk bar at Work Point Barracks outdid the beer canteen, although this doesn't necessarily prove anything.

Just the same, though, nowadays you'll see husky-looking chaps in any cafe drinking milk. True enough if they had the choice they might be drinking beer or something stronger, but it's a fact that before the war they'd have been afraid to drink milk lest they would be thought sissies.

* * *

The real he-men aren't easily spotted in any event. Slipping mentally back a decade or so I remember that the tough guys of our unit—I mean tough when they rolled out of saloons of a Saturday night—weren't so tough when a little toughness was badly needed. In fact when the chips were down some of the pollyannas turned out to be the he-men.

Not that this need be a criterion either. For instance, Neville Cardus tells the story of a Notts cricket worthy of the nineties, Billy Barnes. None of your slick Savile Row-tailored Sutcliffes or Hammonds about him—no sir. He turned up at impeccable Lord's as tight as a drum, but he was a crowd-pleaser and to prevent a scandal he was sent in as usual, first cricket down. Whereupon Billy banged the ball merrily and scored a magnificent century.

Came the aftermath. Discipline is discipline so Billy was hauled up before his county committee. Midland lords, squires, and other notables, and solemnly reprimanded. He had disgraced his county. Billy listened patiently and then spoke: "Well, your lordships, Ah can only say Ah'm sorry, reight sorry, that Ah am. But, beggin' your lordships' pardons, it strikes me as bein' like this—if Ah can go down to Lord's and get drunk and mek a century 'fore lunch, then Ah thinks it ud pay t' committee to get me drunk afore every match."

There doesn't seem much answer to that, does there—except of course that the Sutcliffes and Hammonds can hang out centuries too! He-men are where you find them, either in pubs or milk bars.

Britain's Stand on Iranian Oil

By W. N. EWER

LONDON.—The issues of the dispute about the nationalization of the Persian oil industry do not affect only Britain and Persia. It is not simply a question of the British Government seeking to protect its own commercial and financial interests. The implications are far more wide-reaching: both the legal implications and the economic implications.

* * *

The legal issue is not that of the right of a sovereign state to nationalize, or in any other way, to take possession of property inside its own territory. That is not challenged by anybody. But the method which the Persian Government has adopted raises quite another issue—that of the right of a sovereign state to denounce unilaterally a contract which it has entered into either with another state or with some foreign person or corporation. And that goes right down to the roots of our present system of international law, and especially of international contractual relations.

It is, of course, perfectly true that international contracts in which one of the parties is a sovereign state cannot be enforced. Even though judgment may be given in any dispute either by a world court or by an arbitral body, that judgment cannot be enforced if either party refuses to carry it out. Somewhat paradoxically a contract of this kind could only be enforced if the aggrieved party were both willing and strong enough to use armed force to assert its right, but that is not law; it is the negation of law, and in effect in the modern world civilized powers have renounced any claim that may once have been asserted to use armed force in such a way.

* * *

So the position today is that all international contractual relations assume and depend on the willingness of governments to carry out, without compulsion, agreements into which they have freely entered. And every time that any government, whatever its strength, repudiates that obligation, it shakes the whole system on which all international contractual relations are necessarily based.

In particular, it inevitably shakes its own credit. Any government which repudiates a contract makes it exceedingly difficult for anybody in future to make other contracts, especially long-term contracts, with it. And, if such action becomes frequent, or is generally condoned, then it must become more and more difficult to find a basis for long-term contractual agreements generally. So that if Persia were to persist in claiming the right of repudiation and refusal to negotiate about its desire either to alter or end its contract with the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company, it would not merely be breaking an agreement with the company, but it would be violating the rules and practice of law and morality on which all intercourse between civilized nations is based.

That is one reason why the British Government is anxious to persuade the Persian Government not to persist in its apparent intention to act unilaterally but to reach a new settlement, quite possibly one providing for some kind of nationalization on what the British note of May 19 describes as "a fair and equitable basis".

* * *

The second point of general concern is a practical one. It is exceedingly important, not only to Britain, but for many other countries, especially those of the Middle East, that there should be no interruption or reduction of the supply of Persian oil. And if that is important for the purchasing countries it is even more important for Persia herself. A cessation in the export of oil would bring such a decrease in the revenue of the Persian Government that it would throw the budget hopelessly out of balance. It would completely upset Persia's balance of trade, and since the oil industry, employing over 70,000 Persians, is the biggest in the country, it would create at once a formidable unemployment problem.

Now a negotiated settlement, whatever its basis, would obviously provide for the continuous operation of the oil-fields and refinery. But if there were no negotiated settlement, if Persia were simply to seize the fields and plant, then at the very least a major dislocation would be inevitable. That happened in the case of Mexico, where after a rash and hurried nationalization, production fell to less than a quarter. And in the case of Persia, dislocation would almost certainly be even worse. There might even be complete cessation. For the plain fact is that if the company and its staff were forced to cease operations, the Government would be unable either to find the necessary technical staff, or to make the necessary marketing arrangements. And the result would inevitably be a widespread economic dislocation affecting very many countries besides Britain and Persia.

These are some of the considerations which the British Government has to bear in mind. It cannot merely consider its own immediate financial interests, but has to take into account the widespread legal implications and possible economic consequences over a very much wider field.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

GILLES Purcell of The Canadian Press lost a leg overseas, but he flew to Paris this spring and is now, or shortly will be, flying to Australia. He gets around better, he reflects, than if he had four legs.

In late May, he was trout fishing in Northern Quebec, going the portages, one of them more than a mile long, amid the arbutus and the jackpine, quite as handily as any of his companions. The only trouble he had was with his guide. When in the woods, Purcell removes his artificial leg and employs special crutches. Sitting in a canoe, evenly distributed, Purcell appears to be off-centre with that one leg; and his guide could not get over the impression that his monsieur was sitting askew. The guide spent most of his time precariously balancing himself and the canoe against the optical illusion of Purcell.

Around the birch fire one night, Purcell confessed that what his leg costs him more than anything else are those commonplace strolls a man takes along the up-town shopping streets of an evening, when he goes out to post a letter or to visit the drug store. Purcell can't do that. He goes anywhere and everywhere in his car, of course; and when he gets there, is as competent as he is at home to get around. On a recent occasion, he had some engine trouble in his car and had to pull in and park along a busy shopping street. He got out and went looking for the nearest garage.

He says it was almost in childish glee he found himself window-shopping along the street, a pleasure he had denied himself for years. He found a toy shop, for instance, and discovered the delightful advances that have been made, in the postwar years, in the toy industry. He bought $6 worth. He also visited a tobacco shop, a drug store and sundry beautiful pokey little stores of a fascinating kind that he had almost forgotten existed.

Victoria in Beard and Crinoline

From Files of The Daily British Colonist for June, 1864

By G. E. MORTIMORE

STORIES of two men who bolted were told in The Daily British Colonist.

The first man was a Russian. Did the Tsar have his own iron curtain, perhaps? Anyway, this Slav seemed to prefer Vancouver Island:

"Yesterday afternoon as the Russian barque Oskar and Georg was being towed out of the harbor. . . . a Russian sailor took a header from the stern, opposite Pickett's wharf, and struck out for shore.

"One of Reid's ferry boats was immediately pulled out to the assistance of the swimmer, and a Kanaka pulled off in another boat. The sailor declined to enter Reid's boat, but clambered into the Kanaka's boat, and desired him to pull quickly to shore.

"The Oskar and Georg proceeded on, and the captain called out to those on shore to have the man arrested. On reaching terra firma, however, he sat down quietly and divested his boots and garments of some of the salt water, after which he sauntered away unmolested. The man declared he would not, under any circumstances, return to the ship."

* * *

The second fugitive, one Mr. Quarles, fled to Washington Territory owing some $30,000, with his creditors close on his heels.

The creditors hired the steamer Eliza Anderson and sailed to Port Angeles, where they learned that Quarles had started about three hours before, down the trail to Port Townsend, where he hoped to catch the mail steamer Pioneer. So the Eliza Anderson steamed on to Port Townsend. Nobody had seen Quarles.

"Some of the party accordingly landed, and began to search for him, when he quietly walked on board the Anderson and asked for a passage to Olympia, which was at once granted him with the greatest pleasure.

"The steamer at once put to sea, but instead of going to Olympia, took a direct course to Victoria. Quarles, in blissful ignorance of where he was going, walked around the deck for about two hours, and then . . . turned in to a stateroom and fell sound asleep.

"The party of creditors, although jubilant at the unexpected ease of the capture, dared not allow themselves to be seen, but . . . remained snugly cooped up in the cabin, for fear anyone should suspect their presence."

As poor Quarles was dressing to go ashore, a Victoria policeman snapped the handcuffs on him. "He was then brought out on deck, believing all the time he was about to land at Olympia, when watchman McGee . . . said quietly, 'Do you know where you are? You're in Victoria.' "

"'In Victoria!' cried the wretched prisoner, throwing up his manacled hands. 'How did I get here?' With a woebegone glance about him, he turned his face to the wheelhouse and burst into tears. He was at once led off to prison. . . ."

In his pockets they found $116.25 and a lot of unpaid bills.

SCOTS

A Maori child here learned about Scotch canniness the hard way. After she had sung a Maori song of welcome for a Scottish tourist and received a penny, the Scot in turn sang one about the land o' the heather, took the penny back and left the most surprised child in New Zealand gaping at him open-mouthed.

The Black Watch is a fierce and furious regiment with a fine record of Scottish military valour a great deal of it achieved by Cockneys who have never been nearer the heather than on Hampstead Heath. But whether the fierce spirit of the Black Watch is generated in the glens or in the Old Kent Road, there is one place where it most certainly is not—on Maddison Avenue. There the braw brecht tailors of New York are advertising: "Our Famous Tartan Shorts for Men as well as Women. Wear them for golf, wear them in the country—these handsomely tailored shorts in traditional Black Watch tartans."

Rhodesian Ridgeback Pride of Veldt; No Lions in B.C., So Remains Pet

Mountain lions of British Columbia should start heading for the tall timber.

A new foe may soon cross their path in the Rhodesian Ridgeback—a 75-pound bundle of tawny and muscular dog that has been training on real African lions.

Prime sample of the Ridgeback, pride of the veldt, has been an attraction at the Victoria Kennel Club Inc. show, which closed late yesterday.

Owned by Dr. and Mrs. D. Lott of Duncan, Starlight of Emanse, imported from England, has come no closer to the North American style of lion, to date, than a cougar skin which he tore up, obviously under the impression he was in the battle of the century.

But he looks capable of tackling the real thing.

NO FIGHT NOW

Actually, his owners have no intention of risking Starlight single-footed against a cougar—a mean customer when cornered. Later, they say, when present litters have matured, the cougar-hunt angle will be explored.

The dog would probably fight though, if the theory that his breed resulted from a cross between a Cuban bloodhound and a Hottentot hunting dog is correct.

Less mysterious is the "ridgeback" business. The lion hunters have a spine of stiff hairs, darker than their red or wheaten coats, along the spine.

Some authorities say the ridge comes from Phu Quoc, a native of southeast Asia. Nobody seems to know where Phu Quoc got the ridge in the first place.

According to the breeders, it is not necessary to have lion-hunting ambitions before considering the ridgeback as a pet.

He is described as a fine pal—to everything but lions, that is.

Man Collapses

Borzoi, Buddies Bored; People Enjoy Show

Everybody loves a dog show—except the dogs.

A veteran expert on show dogs, Fred Dodsworth, president of the Victoria Kennel Club, said yesterday 90 per cent of the dogs "were bored stiff by the whole business."

The sight of dogs dozing in their kennels seemed to confirm his estimate.

Make what you like of it, the majority of the ten per cent of canines that do enjoy being on show are females, according to the expert.

"They seem to know more about what's going on," he said. "And they like to show off for the judge."

ASK FOR RIBBON

"When they're in the ring they take a look at the judge and practically ask for the ribbon," he added.

A check of the normal careers of dogs shown at the kennel club show which concluded yesterday seemingly demonstrated why most of them would be bored.

For instance, there was a dog from a breed trained to range the African veldt hunting lions, and a tall disdainful Borzoi of a breed originally in the wolf hunting business in Russia.

Actually they couldn't pull the wool over her eyes. Her job was minding sheep, not showing off in front of judges in a stuffy room.

Some of the owners voiced what they felt would be the dogs' thoughts. Like the owner of Pulham Gentleman George, an English Bulldog.

"TOO TIRESOME"

"Really, it's just too tiresome," Gentlemen George's thoughts were quoted.

Then there was the peppy Boston terrier—one of the ten per cent not too, too, distressed by it all.

According to her owner, Wassendean Dimples was saying, "I'm getting a kick out of this, and I don't intend to miss a thing."

But for the snow-white Samoyede, a sled dog from the northlands; the 155-pound black Newfoundlands, the rabbit-rabid beagles, the Welsh Corgis; the Gedman shepherds, smart enough to be seeing-eye dogs, it was just too dull to bark about.

They were probably satisfied to leave the whole business to the newshound—a last-minute entry.

Children Play With Matches, Firemen Called

City firemen attended two fires yesterday, one started by children playing with matches.

They were called to 239 Richmond Road at 10.30 a.m. to put out a fire in a mattress after it was ignited by children playing with matches.

Damage was slight in both cases.

Seven Young Artists Given Awards For Best Clean-Up Week Posters

Seven young artists shared the limelight at a meeting of Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

They were winners of the school poster contest sponsored by the chamber during Clean-up, Paint-up Week, May 14 to 20.

Shy, Saskatchewan-born Doris Walker, 14, a Grade VIII pupil at Victoria West, carried off the Bapco Trophy for her school. The trophy was top award in the junior high school division.

BRIGHT CREATION

Her poster was a bright creation in greens and yellows showing store fronts getting a coat of paint.

Second prize in that division went to Marjorie Swain, Tolmie School; and third, Terry Gregson, Victoria West.

In the elementary school division, David Hamilton, 13, Burnside School, won the New Method Laundry Cup. Iona Thormoe, Burnside, was second, and Jimmy Lee, North Ward, third.

Logana Farm Hoe-Downers Still Off Job

Nine women who dropped their hoes and left the loganberry rows of Logana Farm in Keating in protest against the dismissal of a woman fellow-employee, were still idle today.

The women said yesterday they didn't know if they had jobs to go back to or not and had heard no word following their stop-work move Friday.

Employed at 75 cents an hour on hoeing jobs, the women quit work after farm management had refused, they said, to give any reason for firing the dismissed woman.

The discharged worker said yesterday she had been told "we are laying off some workers."

The hoe-downers claimed the farm management was actually advertising for more help at the time.

An official at Logana Farm refused yesterday to comment on the situation.

A spokesman for the Victoria Bakery and Confectionery Workers, local 267, said the report was awaited with interest here.

Wage negotiations for 70 workers here are expected to begin in August.

Shoppers' Opinions Split On Change in Half-Day

Elimination or any change in the Wednesday afternoon store holiday in Victoria is in the hands of shoppers as well as merchants, city solicitor A. J. Patton emphasized yesterday.

And shoppers' opinions seem to be split equally for and against any change.

[illegible] by the city employees a referendum among all eligible voters for either elimination of the holiday in favor of a six-day work week or a change to any other afternoon of the work week.

Public opinion among housewives swayed unevenly. One suggested the holiday remain unless staggered hours or extra help could be arranged to keep businesses open. Another felt that stores should close, as not all tourists come to purchase goods.

A plebiscite two years ago by the Chamber of Commerce disclosed that less than half the merchants polled submitted an answer. No change in the system was favored by 133 of 194 answers.

Those favoring open Wednesday all year round numbered 25 while 30 favored open stores from June to September 30.

Peaceful Solution for Doukhobors Seen Possible After Special Report

A peaceful settlement of the relocation of the Sons of Freedom from the Kootenay district may be arranged.

Attorney-General Gordon Wismer reported yesterday that the consultative committee on the Doukhobor question will submit its report soon and that the committee feels "there is a real prospect of a permanent solution to the problem."

"The committee believed that the Sons of Freedom generally are completely in agreement with the committee's program and not in sympathy with those criminals who may be part of a small core of fanatics who wish to prevent a peaceful settlement," he added.

The Doukhobors and people in communities involved were called upon to be patient.

"There appears such an excellent chance of an early settlement that it would be a tragedy if, by ill-considered and hasty action of any of the people concerned, these plans were set at naught," the Attorney-General said.

Mr. Wismer termed "regrettable" the violence early last week in the Castlegar and Grand Forks regions. The R.C.M.P. are endeavoring to catch the culprits, he added.

Members of the consultative committee which called upon the attorney-general included Col. F. J. Mead, Emmett Gulley, Professor C. A. Rowles, Dr. Harry Hawthorne and John Shirras.

Doukhobors in the Kootenay area number about 12,000, of whom about 2,000 are reactionary Sons of Freedom who broke from the orthodox Doukhobors many years ago.

The only time a declarer has the right to complain about bad breaks is when he could not have overcome those breaks through his own efforts. Consider this case:

South, dealer.

The bidding:

The grand-slam contract was eminently correct.

West might well have opened a trump, as the lead most likely to do no harm, but he preferred the singleton heart. The king was put up and South quickly drew trumps. He discarded a diamond on the heart ace, then started to run off the club suit, prepared to ruff out a club if necessary. Unfortunately, however, the 5-1 break forced the ruffing of two clubs, and this was rather difficult to do with only one trump left in dummy! Down one!

Beyond argument, South ran into a bad break of clubs, but if he had spent just a moment or two in counting tricks, he would have seen that the various suit breaks, whatever they were, scarcely mattered! Thirteen tricks were almost iron-clad. The safest, in fact the 99 per cent safe way to play the hand, was to ruff a low heart immediately with a high trump, then to lead a low trump to the ten-spot. Now another heart should be ruffed high, and South's remaining small trump led to the jack. A third heart ruff with a high trump would clean up the heart suit except for the ace; and now South could enter dummy with a diamond, draw West's last trump while he himself discarded, and finally collect the heart trick and three top clubs.

B.C. Coast Rugged Beat For R.C.M.P. Boatmen

VANCOUVER, June 2 (CP).—On British Columbia's rugged northern coast all men are brothers, allied against their common enemy—the sea.

It's a land where families 40 miles apart on the long reaches of some northern inlet are close neighbors; where a man's word is his bond, and they don't lock their doors at night.

Out of this territory into dry-dock here have come two sea-going Mounties and their trim grey launch, the P.M.L. 17.

Skipper Bill Mason and Engineer Doug Gorrie, quiet and unassuming, are the unknown heroes of countless rescue missions along their 200-mile beat out of Ocean Falls.

Anonymous as required by the code of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, they seldom get public credit for the jobs they handle each winter.

But you can hear the other side of the story from grateful trappers and fishermen who have seen the curving prow of the patrol boat cut through the mist—or the ice—when all hope was gone.

Their exploits make the papers, but their names are never included, and that's the way they prefer it.

Nature is their chief enemy in the wild land along the coast. There are many weeks when spray make a four-inch "normal" ice coat over the whole ship.

FIX RADIOS

Law enforcement is only a small part of the sea-going Mounties' work on the coast patrol. They fix fishermen's radios, handle bounties for wolves and cougars, and licenses for hunting and trapping, speed injured loggers to hospital and keep an eye out for stills in the hills.

But there are compensations, too. At the canneries there is always a meal ready for them. At logging camps, there's chow with the gang in the cookhouse. Indian camps have the welcome mat out at all times.

When the inspection in dry-dock is over, the big grey launch will cruise out of Vancouver harbor, bound for the north country she calls home.

But she'll show up again—in next winter's headlines.

Canada to Quadruple Newsprint Export

Assurance of continued work for Canada's logging crews is contained in the quadrupling of newsprint tonnage sold to Britain. The British government, with a better supply of dollar currency, has allowed the purchase of 80,000 tons of newsprint in 1951 and more in the following years. Newsprint companies here say the increased demand will not make controls necessary in Canada.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Cartel in Newsprint Hit by Congressman

WASHINGTON, June 2 (AP).—Representative Emanuel Celler (Dem., N.Y.) called on the Office of Price Stabilization today to establish "just and reasonable prices" for newsprint.

His statement followed an announcement at Toronto by the Abitibi Power & Paper Co. that it will raise newsprint prices $10 a ton effective July 1, bringing the New York port price to $116.

Celler, chairman of the House of Representatives' judiciary subcommittee on monopoly, said there are hints of increases by other manufacturers indicating a price-fixing pattern.

"American publishers cannot afford to take this unwarranted action lying down," he said.

OTTAWA SANCTION

Celler's statement said the latest rise in newsprint prices apparently has the sanction of the Canadian Government. But he added that "the Canadian Government, in this instance, is none other than the old Canadian newsprint cartel in disguise."

"Director of the Canadian Defense Production Board," Celler continued, "is the ubiquitous Robert Fowler, erstwhile president of the Newsprint Association of Canada, an organization which the subcommittee's report (on the newsprint industry) revealed as the power behind efforts of Canadian producers to allocate markets, regulate production and fix prices. This matter has been called to the attention of the attorney-general."

ASKS CEILINGS

Saying the action of Canadian manufacturers constitutes a danger to the free press, Celler asked the attorney-general to act and "strongly urgeed" price ceilings on newsprint sold in the United States.

Earlier, Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Dem., Colo.) called on price administrator Michael V. DiSalle to resist the price increase which his letter described as a "gouge."

"If permitted to go through and if it spreads to the whole industry — which it will unless blocked—the newspapers of this country will be compelled to shell out an additional tribute of $300,000,000 to $4,000,000 annually," Johnson said in a letter yesterday.

"This unjustified price gouge by our Canadian neighbors should be resisted with everything we have."

Iron Pyrites May Supply B.C. Plants

VANCOUVER, June 2 (CP)—Iron pyrites now being shipped to Japan from Britannia Mine may be diverted to British Columbia pulp and paper plants.

R. C. Roper, general manager of Britannia Mining and Smelting Co., told the Vancouver Board of Trade members that major paper producers are investigating possibility of extracting sulphur from the pyrites.

Japanese buyers have been taking about 8,000 tons a month from the 100,000-ton stockpile at Britannia. The mine produces 200 tons a month of pyrites.

EASY PROCESS

Sulphur would be extracted in the form of readily usable sulphur dioxide by a burning plant. Mr. Roper said pulp and paper companies who now convert raw sulphur to sulphur dioxide would be saving one process by using pyrites.

Mattes, formed by the residue, could be used for smelting into pig iron, which is now being done by the Japanese.

Markets Show Best Advance Since January

By BILL DANIELS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices rolled higher on stock markets this week in their best advance in three months. It was the greatest increase since the week of January 28, when the 20-month bull market was still in progress.

The sharp price climb was much different from that of three months ago, however. Then there was great strength and interest in the market. That week chalked up one of the biggest weekly shares-traded totals in many years. Sales for Monday, January 27, were more than 5,000,000 shares.

This week was one of the quietest in years. It indicated the spring trading slump that began in mid-February was still continuing. And it looked as if it might continue for some time.

The upturn simply could not gain investors' enthusiasm. What accounted for the fact that the exchange's averages and indexes were up sharply for the week was that the carrier issues—the high-priced, fairly-reliable issues that are mostly used in averages—the high-priced, fairly-reliable issues that are mostly used in averages—were the busiest ones. Speculators were extremely cautious with issues that involved some risk.

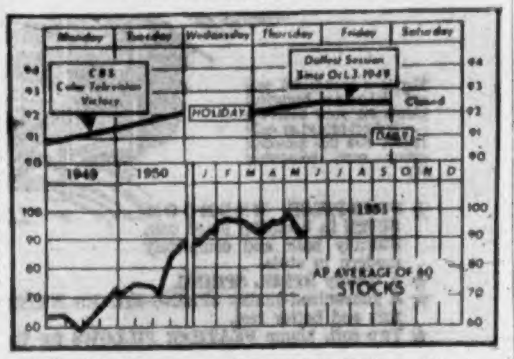
PAPERS FEATURE

Papers, incidentally, were the talk of the week in Canadian circles. Reports early in the week that Canada will increase newsprint exports to the United Kingdom this year by four or five times, and announcement Friday by Abitibi of a $10-a-ton increase for the price of newsprint gave the industry a bullish outlook.

For the week from Friday to Friday, the Toronto Stock Exchange indices showed industrials up 13.52 at 328.16, golds up 1.81 at 76.72, base metals up 9.78 at 177.57 and western oils up 5.32 at 106.00.

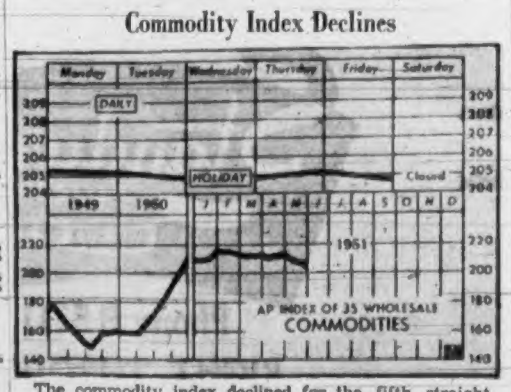
In the Montreal averages banks were off .40 at 29.16, utilities up 9.7 at 85.2, industrials up 11.9 at 223, combined up 8.2 at 177.1, papers up 75.6 at 832.95, and golds up 1.78 at 60.53.

Wall Street Stocks Advance



Following three consecutive weekly declines, The Associated Press average of 60 stocks pushed ahead, closing this week at 92.4 from 90.9 a week ago. United States Memorial Day holiday and start of summer Saturday closing restricted trading.—(A.P. wirephoto.)

Commodity Index Declines



The commodity index declined for the fifth straight week, finishing this week at 204.7 against 205.3 in preceding period. Textile component again showed largest loss.—(A.P. wirephoto.)

U.S. Magazine Hits Aluminum Snub As Blunder, Kick in Canada's Teeth

By W. T. GALT
Colonist Business Editor

United States failure to jump at the chance of a contract with the Aluminum Company of Canada is described as a costly blunder and a "kick in the teeth" for Canada in the current issue of Fortune magazine.

In a featuure article titled "The Great Aluminum Farce" the magazine points to increasing shortages of aluminum in the United States and calls aluminum "the most politically explosive substance on earth."

The article makes a strong case for increasing United States imports of Alcan aluminum.

"The America Firsters oppose buying ingot from Canada; they prefer to expand our own industry even though it will require the pre-emption of vast quantities of scarce materials and, still worse, electric power," the United States magazine asserts.

FEAR TARIFF WAR

On the other hand, internationalists favored buying as much of Canada's aluminum as they could get, but feared a tariff war "brought on by an over-expanded, high-cost American industry trying to protect itself against Canadian ingot, lowest-cost in history."

Chances of a solution are remote, Fortune declares. And "no matter what happens, some segment of the American economy must take a beating."

"It was the Canadians who brought action on aluminum," the magazine states.

"In the torpid days of August, 1950, the Munitions Board was still dozing comfortably in the Pentagon." The U.S. had not stockpiled any aluminum during short years.

DEAL OFFERED

"The Canadians offered to supply the American government with 220,000 tons of aluminum" over a three-year period. "The price was to be at the prevailing market, 16½ cents a pound.

"In light of what has happened since, the proposal glitters like the Comstock lode," Fortune states.

The Canadian offer rang bells in the offices of United States aluminum producers. Then U.S. producers were asked to expand "indefinitely." Finally they were asked for an additional 500,000 tons a year expansion.

Meanwhile the Canadian offer was bogged down by Washington politics. World prices were going up, the 16½-cent price was a bargain. At the terminal date of the Canadian offer, the U.S. asked for an extension. It was granted.

SNAPPED UP BY U.K.

The United States finally let Alcan's offer lapse. "Bright and early the next day, the British waltzed off with our forfeited aluminum," the United States magazine states.

"But the Canadian charade was not yet over.

"A week later, Jess Larson, general services administrator, and a caravan of staff men, obviously organized to save face both in Canada and at home, arrived in Montreal.

"Some [illegible] with Alcan's president, R. E. Powell, for two hours, got around to asking how much aluminum Canada could deliver immediately, found it had all gone to Britain when he failed to exercise the U.S. option, shook hands in his usual amiable fashion, and went back to Washington.

DISTORTION

"There he smoothly announced that the Canadian offer had not been accepted because it provided no immediate delivery of aluminum.

"Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, rearing back between the stuffed American flags in his handsome office, added a punch line: 'Just because you want to buy a book doesn't mean you have to join the Book-of-the-Month Club'."

"It was just the sort of dandy crack that should have accompanied a kick in the teeth for our best customer and the most pro-American nation on earth."

Subsequently, Fortune reports, there was order and counter-order in a scramble to build up production, a process that Fortune declares will require subsidy and great diversion of power to produce a product at still higher costs than Canada's.

SOUGHT CONTRACT

The Canadians went back to Washington to dicker for another sales contract with the United States in order to build "the world's biggest aluminum plant, in British Columbia."

"That sounded like a plot to sell out the future American industry for a mess of aluminum," Fortune jeers.

Fortune declares the United States is apparently going ahead to build up an expensive industry that will never be able to compete with Canada in world markets.

The magazine strongly proposes to "enter into contracts with Canada to buy whatever aluminum we require beyond the prospective 1,250,000-ton capacity of United States industry.

"The time has now come when the United States, instead of proscribing Canadian aluminum should encourage it as an adjunct to our own economy.

INCOMPARABLE

"Alcan's natural advantages are incomparable; U.S. labor cost 35 per cent more, power 150 per cent more.

"Canada has always scrupulously sold at the U.S. market price, recognizes the U.S. as the world's best market, has been a faithful supplier of hard-pressed American fabricators, and, so long as tariffs can be raised, would be most unlikely to gouge the nation on price."

In a colored chart of Alcan's Kitimat plant, now under construction in the desolate mountain fastness of British Columbia, Fortune notes that the $500,000,000 plant "symbolizes the wisdom of buying from Canada; and the absurdity of expanding high-cost U.S. capacity."

Steel Shortage Cause

Sharp Production Cuts Face Consumer Industry

NEW YORK, June 3 (INS).—The time is fast approaching when U.S. consumer industries will be forced to cut their production schedules sharply because of a shortage of steel.

An indication of the difficulties which will confront the producers of automobiles, washing machines, refrigerators, and appliances in the near future was re-emphasized last week by the Republic Steel Corporation, whose shipments for defense and defense-related industries were expected to increase to between 50 and 55 per cent in the third quarter, as compared with the current 40 per cent rate.

TRUCK OUTPUT RECORD

The automobile industry already has begun to feel the effects of steel shortages. While the output of trucks, vital to military and defense industry needs, was the highest monthly total in history, production of passenger cars was some 17 per cent below the 583,000 units which came off the assembly lines in May, 1950.

Further reduction in passenger car output and additional layoffs of auto workers appeared certain in June, when a further steel cut becomes effective.

On the cheerier side, the stock market enjoyed a good recovery this past week after the severe battering it took in the preceding fortnight.

Steel industry output fell back slightly this past week. Operations averaged 102.7 per cent of ingot capacity, a decline of .9 points from the preceding week.

PRICE WAR

The major news on the retail front was the price war among major New York city department stores, but it will be another week before official figures on the business done during the price-slashing spree are available. All indications point to a substantial jump over a year ago.

Meantime, nationwide department store sales in the week May 26 continued disappointing.

Freight carloadings in the week ended May 26 totaled 811,799 cars, an increase of 4 per cent over the same week last year.

Nationwide power output in the week ended May 26 made a sizeable recovery from the 1951 low set the week before to reach 6,652,699,000 kilowatt hours.

Business failures around the country increased to 191 in the week ended May 24 from the 171 casualties of the week before.

Egg Receipts Slightly Less

Egg receipts showed a slight decrease during the past week.

Some pee wee size eggs from the new pullet crop are appearing, according to the British Columbia weekly egg and poultry market report.

Although prices remained unchanged, market tones are easier with both local and shipping down slightly.

Frequent carlots of mixed grades are being received from Prairie points.

About 360 cases of United States Grade "B" eggs arrived in British Columbia during the week for breaking purposes.

Poultry receipts are fair. Fowl supplies are increasing and broilers are in good supply. Breeder turkeys are tapering off. Prices are unchanged.

Oil Permit Deal Made in Regina

REGINA, June 2 (CP).—A special agreement on oil permits covering approximately 500,000 acres in West-Central Saskatchewan has been signed by R. M. Balfour, K.C., of Regina with the Provincial Government.

It is understood arrangements are being made to incorporate a new company, Saskoil Ltd., and that the permits will be assigned to that company. New York interests are said to be active in the new company.

here's what happens
if your husband leaves no will

...CASE 3

Yourself and two or more children under age.

A thoughtfully planned will spells peace of mind. A competent executor spells security.

Where there are two or more children in the family, B.C. law prescribes that two-thirds of the estate be divided equally among them. Your use of the children's share for education, medical expenses, etc., is restricted without court permission. Such an arrangement involves unnecessary inconvenience for all parties concerned.

Back to Old-Style Publicity, Cries Dynamic Jerry Wald

HEARD IN HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, June 2. — In our town there is no one with more amazingly original ideas and more bubbling, unrestrained enthusiasm than one Jerry Wald, who, with Norman Krasna, is the producing kingpin of R.K.O.

Jerry's excitement when he gets an idea (which is about every other second) is such that he wants to discuss it—but quickly—with everyone within earshot. So what happens is that this personable young producer gets his name in print more than any other Hollywood personality.

In the case of Jerry, I must say, this glory is well deserved because he has a record of fine pictures, made while he was at Warners. And he once won the Irving Thalberg award—the gold statue all producers covet.

I ventured to ask Jerry how and why he gets his name in the newspapers ten times oftener than any one else in Hollywood.

"Put it down to my newspaper training," he said, (Jerry was once a columnist), "or put it down to a feeling I have that we should go back to the old days when Greta Garbo's silence, Jean Harlow's platinum hair, Joan Crawford's red lips and Marion Davies' fragile blonde beauty were headlined.

"Irving Thalberg knew how to publicize his star properties the way I firmly believe it should be done today.

LACK OF ENTHUSIASM

"I believe stories that are good for the industry should be circulated. If there is anything wrong with our industry today it is the lack of excitement, lack of enthusiasm and lack of energy in selling motion pictures."

"Is that why you had Shelley Winters and Farley Granger announce their engagement on the set of your picture, 'Behave Yourself'?" I asked him.

That question brought a smile to his lips, and he replied, "Perhaps."

Then he said, "I was talking to Norman the other day," (Norman and Jerry are as close as bread and butter. They share all their ideas and picture making on a 50-50 basis) "and Norman and I think that in order to make successful pictures, this business has to shed some of the superficial sheen in favor of honesty and imagination.

LOST CAPACITY

"Norman agreed with me that there are too many of us today who have such a craving for intellectual excitement that we have lost the capacity to feel simple emotions."

"What else is on your and Norman's mind?" I asked Jerry.

"Well, we both believe this is the open season for picking on the movies. It's become such a popular pastime that Hollywood is picking on itself, and we think it has slumped itself into a self-induced depression.

"Our business today suffers from a lack of the popular ingredient which made it one of the top industries in the world—an instrument of bringing pleasure and thrills to millions. That ingredient is excitement.

PUBLICIZED

"What made our industry great was its exciting personalities—Carole Lombard, Rudolph Valentino, Marlene Dietrich, Mae West, John Barrymore, Vilma Banky, Rod la Roque, Rogers and Astaire, Jeanette Macdonald and Nelson Eddy. Those were publicized figures.

"All this talk about trying to sell a screen star as 'the girl next door' Norman and I do not believe builds box-office excitement.

"If our industry is to get out of the doldrums we must develop and dramatize our personalities. We must get rid of the prevailing fear in the industry—the fear of insecurity—or we will all end up the way vaudeville did.

"We can—and must—give the public the things they can't get on television. Let's be frank about it—too many stories come out of Hollywood running down our industry, its bad pictures—its mistakes. We believe, without boss, Howard Hughes, that showmanship makes the entertainment world go around."

TOO BUSY

I realize I have been so busy quoting Jerry that I have not told you much about his personal life.

Well, Jerry is a human dynamo. He is up at the crack of dawn no matter how late he has stayed up. He has a family—a beautiful wife, the former Constance Polan; two young sons, Andrew, age four, and Robbie, age eight.

How does he have time for his family? I don't know, but he certainly does. On his free evenings he reads to the children or takes Connie out to dinner. But Jerry doesn't have a lot of time for social activities. He's too busy. He works almost around the clock.

CONSTANCE AVENUE

BEHIND THE SIGNS WITH Jim Nesbitt

Constance Avenue in Esquimalt bears the name of one of the most famous British men-of-war ever stationed on this coast.

H.M.S. Constance, a sailing frigate, was the first British warship to be permanently based in Esquimalt Harbor. That was in 1848, long before there was a shoreside naval establishment at Esquimalt. She was of 2,125 tons, mounted 50 guns, was designed by the famous naval architect, Symonds, and built at Pembroke, England, in 1846.

Her commander here was Capt. George William Conway Courtenay. Capt. Courtenay was a noted officer of the Royal Navy. In 1806 he was a midshipman in H.M.S. Amazon at the capture of the French frigates Marengo and Belle Poule, and he was a lieutenant in H.M.S. Cirene during an attack by boats of that ship on a slave factory on the coast of Africa in 1822. In 1824 Courtenay commanded the Owen Glendower, which was actively engaged against the Ashantees.

Constance Cove in Esquimalt Harbor, and Constance Bank, in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, also commemorate H.M.S. Constance.

Uncle Wiggily Story

By Howard Garis

TUMBLE DOWNIE'S TAIL

Feeling that he has at least solved part of the mystery, by finding Jumpie Umpie the yellow mouse, Uncle Wiggily sat down on the stump and looked at the prettily colored little creature. For Jumpie really had beautifully colored fur. It was not gray, like the fur of Jollie and Jillie Longtail, the mice who lived near Uncle Wiggily. Instead, the fur of Jumpie Umpie was quite a bright yellow on top and beneath the fur was a soft of yellow and brown mixed.

"What did you say your brother's name is?" asked Uncle Wiggily of Jumpie Umpie.

"His name is Tumble Downie," answered the yellow mouse. He was now jumping here and there, all around the stump, looking in different holes and hollows with his bright eyes.

"Why has your brother such a funny name?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "Who gave him the name Tumble Downie?"

"My father did," answered Jumpie Umpie. "He gave me my name, too."

"I can easily understand why you are called Jumpie Umpie, my funny little yellow mouse," said Uncle Wiggily. "It is because, with those long hind legs of yours, you are always jumping up like a kangaroo. But why is your brother named Tumble Downie?"

"Because that is what he is always doing — tumbling down," said Jumpie Umpie.

"And why does your brother fall down so much?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Because he has no tail," answered Jumpie Umpie. "At least he has no tail worth talking about—it is just a teeny weeny stump of a tail—not a long one like mine."

The tail of Jumpie Umpie was about five inches long. As for the yellow mouse, his body was only three inches long.

"Yes, I can easily see that you have a fine, long tail, Jumpie Umpie," remarked Uncle Wiggily. "Your tail is longer than your body, which is rather odd. But since you and your brother belong to the same family, why has he such a short tail and you have such a long tail? What happened to the tail of Tumble Downie?"

"It is a sad story," replied Jumpie Umpie.

"Then perhaps you do not want to tell me about it," suggested the rabbit gentleman kindly.

"Oh, I don't mind telling you about it, but maybe Tumble Downie would like to tell you himself," said Jumpie Umpie. "That is if I can find him. He must be hiding somewhere."

"I will help you find your brother," offered Uncle Wiggily. "But perhaps he will find himself. Let's wait a few minutes and you can tell me something about yourself. Also tell me why you zinged my door bell and how you did it."

"I was not tall enough to reach up to the push-button of your electric bell, Uncle Wiggily. Not even when I stood up as high as I could on my long, hind legs," said Jumpie Umpie. "So I had to jump up until I could reach the push button. Then I punched it with a stick. I could not stay up long enough to give the button a long push. So it had to be a short, jabby push. What you call a "zing!"

"Now I understand how you made my bell ring like a zing," said Uncle Wiggily. "But why did you zing it at all?"

"I wanted you to come out and tell me where Jollie and Jillie Longtail live," explained Jumpe Umpie. "We are cousins and Tumble Downie and I left our home on the other side of the woods to visit the Longtails. But we lost our way. I knew you lived near the Longtails and when I saw your bungalow I jumped up and zinged the bell."

"But why did you run away?" asked the rabbit uncle.

"Because I was afraid something might happen to my brother. I left him alone here near this stump. But when I ran back I could not find him. I hope nothing has happened to him. Oh, here he is now! Come and say hello to Uncle Wiggily, Tumble Downie!"

The rabbit gentleman saw, coming out of the grass, another yellow mouse. He had long hind legs but only a stump of a tail. And when this mouse started toward Uncle Wiggily, something funny happened.

I will tell you about it tomorrow if the sun flower will shine into the dark doghouse so the pussy cat can find her tall ribbon which she lost there.

Young Athletes Stretch After New Records

Eight More Records Topple In Track Meet at Vic High

Eight more records were shattered and the time of another event—the three-mile race run for the first time—was sentered as a record as the British Columbia inter-high school track and field finals concluded at Victoria High School yesterday.

The meet—one of the most successful in the history of British Columbia high school sports—was held in conjunction with the 75th anniversary celebrations of Victoria High School. The host school made it a gala occasion by amassing a total of 73 points to win the aggregate trophy. A feature of the afternoon was the dedication of the new Gyro cinder track, rated one of the finest in the province.

Individual aggregate awards went to Ted Whan of Victoria High and fleet Gerry Bemister of Vancouver's King Edward High School. Whan had a busy afternoon and set a new record for the hop, step and jump, adding a second in the broad jump and thirds in the 220 and 440 for a total of 12 points. Tony Hester of Creston, Ken Swalwell of New Westminster's Trapp Tech and Doug Clement of King Edward scored two victories each for ten points. Miss Bemister dominated the girls' events with record-breaking performances in the 60- and 100-yard dashes.

MAJOR UPSET

Victoria High scored a major upset in winning the aggregate trophy, finishing 23½ points ahead of favored King Edward. The darkhorse Creston team and Oak Bay shared third place with 26 points each. Other school totals were: New Westminster's Duke of Connaught, 15; Trapp Tech, 13; Maple Ridge, 12½; Penticton, 9; Duncan, 8; Langley, 4½; Mount View, 4; Nanaimo, 3; Kitsilamo, Vancouver, 3; Tsolum, 2; St. Louis College, 1½; Woodfibre, 1½, and Rossland, ½.

Victoria High's performance was sufficient to give the Victoria zone the Birks Trophy, awarded for the first time for the zone aggregate total. Oak Bay, Mount View and St. Louis points boosted the Victoria zone total to 104½ points. Vancouver zone was second with 52½, followed by New Westminster, 28; Kootenay, 26½; Fraser Valley, 17; Lower Island, 11; Okanagan, 9, and North Island, 3½.

EASY VICTORY

Although she set two records, Miss Bemister made probably her best performance in leading King Edward to victory in the girls 440-yard relay. Running the anchor lap, the wing-footed British Empire Games sprinter left the other runners standing as she brought her team from a poor second to an easy, going-away victory.

Miss Bemister, one of the smallest athletes present, began by clipping another 1-10 of a second from the 60-yard dash record she set on Friday. She was clocked in 7.2 seconds and came back later to clip 3-10ths of a second from the mark for the 100-yard dash with a time of 11.3 seconds.

Clement also put two new marks into the record book, winning the 440 in 52.2 seconds and the 880 in 2:03.3. The records toppled were 52.6 for the 440, set by T. Thompson of Vancouver Tech in 1947 and equalled by Clement and Whan on Friday and 2:05.9 for the half-mile, set by Oak Bay's Phil Matson in 1949.

The pole-vault mark was raised to 11 feet 1½ inches, 5½ inches higher than the record set by Gerry Kenyon of Penticton in 1949. Kenyon and D. Davis of Maple Ridge both reached the new mark with Davis winning the event on the countback of the misses.

Setting the pace from the start, diminutive Don Burgess of Victoria High ran the mile according to plan and set a new record of 4:35.2, clipping 4.10 seconds from the standard set by Matson in 1949. He ran the first quarter in 64 seconds, the second in 73 seconds, the third in 70 seconds and the fourth in 68.2 seconds. He surprised with the ease with which he pulled away from favored Gerry Downes of Trapp Tech with his final sprint.

Catherine McDonald of Victoria High set a new girls' discus mark of 90 feet 7 inches, topping the standard set by A. Hall of North Vancouver in 1949 by three feet 7½ inches.

TWO-WAY FIGHT

Pete Kirchner and Hedley Sampson of Victoria High waged a two-way battle in the new three-mile event, finishing a scant three feet apart. Kirchner's time of 16:31.6 was entered as the record.

A's Split With Chiefs, Gain Ground in League

HOW THEY STAND

Vancouver	23	11	.750
Spokane	29	16	.644	4½
Salem	23	21	.500	11
Wenatchee	20	26	.435	14
Tacoma	18	25	.419	14½
Tri-City	17	24	.415	14½
Yakima	17	24	.415	14½
VICTORIA	18	26	.409	15

Victoria's patched-up Athletics gained ground in their fight for a first-division berth yesterday, although they managed only a split in two games with the Wenatchee Chiefs.

The A's made it two in a row in the afternoon, 3-2, behind the masterful pitching of Jim Propst, and lost the arclight fixture, 12-3, as Jim Hedgecock failed to produce anything resembling his best form.

When the results were all in, the standings showed the A's were only a game behind the Chiefs, who moved up into fourth place. The Chiefs were only three games out of third place but the bottom six clubs were far behind the second-place Spokane Indians and out of sight of Vancouver Capilanos, who continued to add to a substantial lead.

SEEK MEN

With a play-off spot not too hard to reach, the A's were burning up the wires in an effort to get needed playing strength.

Business Manager Reg Patterson announced yesterday that he had come to terms with outfielder Orrin Snyder, released by Tacoma when K. Chorlton joined the Tigers. Snyder will replace John Vick, released for the second time last night and will appear in the series finale against Wenatchee tomorrow night. Efforts were made to bring Snyder here in time for last night's game but he was unable to get a seat on the plane from Seattle.

Addition of Snyder, who was hitting .317 in latest official averages, is only the first move in what the management hopes will become a general shakeup. Portland is expected to send an infielder next week and negotiations are underway for the services of at least one other player.

The A's did as well as could be expected yesterday with their patched-up line-up. Propst was practically unhittable in the first game and went all the way although he caused some uneasy moments in the ninth inning when he was touched for a two-run homer which put the Chiefs uncomfortably close. In the first eight innings, the only hit off his delivery was a topped ball down the third-base line which refused to roll foul. He had fine control and must have set something of a personal record by issuing only one base on balls.

Hal Jackson provided the necessary runs in the sixth when he hit a two-run homer after catcher Len Neal failed to take his easy foul pop on the previous pitch.

ROUT

It was a different story in the afterpiece. Hedgecock was distinctly unimpressive and went out under fire in the middle of a seven-run fifth inning which put the game out of reach, particularly as southpaw Tom Breisinger wasn't having any of his usual control trouble.

While the afternoon game produced the more interesting baseball, some fine defensive plays featured the arclight rout. Left-fielder Will Hafey made the play of the series in the sixth when he came up with Lilio Marcucci's terrific line drive. He took the ball after juggling it at a full gallop with his back to the infield and Marcucci lost a triple. Centre-fielder L'il Arnerich also made a great catch of a bid by Marv Diercks and Gene Thompson raced from his shortstop position to snag a foul fly in front of the bleacher screen.

Track Meet Wins Praise Of Osborne

Bob Osborne, president of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Association, stated yesterday that the British Columbia inter-high school track and field championships showed a lot of talent and was a good, well-handled meet. He complimented Laurie Wallace, V.H.S. director of athletics, and other officials responsible for the staging of the meet.

Osborne expressed his pleasure at the excellent new cinder track and said he believes it will be a boon to the track sport in general. He added that Victoria could do a lot to improving the calibre of track and field athletes by staging a number of inter-school and dual meets on the track each year instead of limiting their competition to one big meet.

Complete track results follow:

NANAIMO, June 2.—In another penalty-studded battle—a total of 72 minutes in penalties was called—Victoria Shamrocks extended their league lead in the Inter-City Lacrosse League with a hard-fought 13-5 victory over Nanaimo Native Sons here tonight.

The Sons, although more at home on their shorter home floor, could never catch the Rocks after they jumped into an early first-quarter lead. Bob Monaghan paced them to a 4-2 lead at the quarter with two goals in a period that saw six penalties.

ANDREWS HURT

The second quarter featured only one goal, a penalty shot and an injury to Bill Andrews. Jack Scott of Nanaimo failed on the penalty shot, awarded him when he was charged into by Andrews. Andrews injured his left ankle but was able to return to action and blanked the Sons throughout the entire quarter. Art Green's goal from Arnie Ferguson gave the Irish a 5-2 halftime lead.

The second half opened with both teams intent on mayhem and Victoria outscored the Sons, 4-2, again in the third quarter. In between six penalties, including majors to Len Scott of Shamrocks and Laurie Garland of Nanaimo for fighting, Duff McCaghey and Norm Coates, both seeing action after lay-offs, led the attack. Referees Gordie Folka and Frank Lee were hard pressed to keep the game under control as the battle-royal continued into the fourth quarter.

VICTORIANS WITH SONS

Al Denoni, who along with fellow-Victorian Vic Sage, saw action with the Sons, scored the lone Nanaimo goal in the final quarter while McCaghey, with his second, and Monaghan, with his third, paced the four-goal Victoria attack.

Two misconducts highlighted the fourth quarter. Norm Baker picked up a misconduct and five-minute major for trading blows with Nanaimo's Spud Morelli, while Ken Simpson of Sons received a misconduct.

Andrews and Fred Fulla both made 24 stops with Andrews particularly brilliant in the first quarter when he broke the Sons' hearts repeatedly. The Nanaimo defence again failed Fulla and the Rocks kept boring in time after time to find him uncovered.

Lloyd Steele, retiring Nanaimo coach, received a presentation before the fourth quarter but his promise of a present for the fans failed to materialize.

All-Star Football Squad To Be Selected Tonight

Victoria's all-star football club for the exhibition match against the touring Fulham club will be selected at a meeting tonight. Queried after yesterday's test match between the "Probables" and "Possibles," manager Tommy Restell refused to give any indication of the final selections.

He said yesterday's match produced "some of the finest football seen here for some time." He diplomatically made no mention of the play of the "Probables" but singled out Ken Snedden, youthful right wing of the "Possibles" for special mention and also singled out teammates Bill Hope and Don Hendry as standouts for the losing side. However, none of the trio is eligible for the All-Stars.

PROBABLES PROBABLE

It is thought that the "Probables" line-up will remain almost intact when the Victoria team is chosen, although there are two or three positions in the doubtful class.

Joe Travis seems assured of the goalkeeping berth and it is almost certain that captain Herman Henry will start on the back line. Centre-forward Wallace Milligan, inside - right Denny McGee and left-winger Ab Travis can be reasonably conceded spots on the forward line. Stan Boh, signed by United for Connaught Cup play, has been declared eligible for the All-Stars and may win a berth at inside left. Whether or not Ced Robb will remain on the right wing is a matter for conjecture.

SWITCH POSSIBLE

Centre-forward Sid Robbins seems set but there could be a switch in the wing-half positions, where Bob Allen and Ken Williams started for the "Probables" yesterday. Honeymooning Jack Robbins may take over again at left half if he has returned, and there is a possibility that John Pickburn, who replaced Allen when the latter injured his knee, may be given a chance somewhere on the half line.

Fourteen players will be selected, but only 11 are likely to see action. No substitutes will be permitted except in case of injury and the starting line-up will have to go the full 90 minutes.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

Ed Gilmore, former coach at the Richmond lacrosse club and now a Duncan resident, believes he holds the record for speed in being hired and fired as a lacrosse coach "inasmuch as I was replaced before I ever started."

In a letter to the writer yesterday, Gilmore gave his side of the rather-mysterious change-over which saw him announced as the new Nanaimo coach one day, replaced two days later before he had handled the Native Sons in one game:

"At a meeting of the Nanaimo club last week I was asked to help the team in my capacity as an experienced senior coach. The conditions under which I accepted the position are herein outlined:

"1—As coach, I insisted in having complete charge of all players at all times with no interference from executive members.

"2—That all players who would not, or could not, follow out the instructions given would be immediately dropped and replaced at my discretion.

"3—That, as the team did not appear to follow out the simple fundamentals of defensive or offensive lacrosse and was not in playing condition, I, as coach, proposed rigid training and practise periods in order that I would be able to present a team which would at least give the attending fans entertainment for their money.

"These terms were agreed upon by the players and club executives present and I was promised full co-operation. How sincere the executive was I leave you to judge.

"The weak exhibition given in Victoria last week by the Nanaimo club substantiates that my proposed policy is the only possible solution for the betterment of the club. In the interest of the game, the paying public is entitled to some consideration and senior lacrosse must be operated as a business enterprise rather than as a means of recreation for a few players and executive members.

"I believe that with strict coaching, several of the players on the club could be developed to senior calibre. However, it would appear that outside help is necessary."

Just what was the reason for the switch is something the writer doesn't know but I was told the day after Gilmore had been announced as coach that a change was impending. The source was excellent and it didn't need much deduction to name Ted Menzies as the probable choice.

Now comes word from Vancouver that Roy Cavallin is being considered for the job. It is presumed that the cagey veteran is being considered as a possibility solely because of what he might add to the team as a player. It seems unlikely that Nanaimo would hire another non-playing coach now.

That the Nanaimo club will need considerable bolstering if it is to win one of the four play-off spots is obvious. The club just lacks enough players of senior calibre to hold its own. In all fairness, however, it should be pointed out that Native Sons stepped into a vastly-improved league and that it would be surprising if they are able to beat out one of the other four clubs.

At the same time, remarks such as the one attributed to Ralph Douglas, coach of the New Westminster Commandos, don't do much for the game. Douglas is reported to have suggested that Nanaimo be dropped at once after his club had won by a lopsided score.

It would be far better if league and club officials united in an effort to make the Up-Islanders a better club by assisting in every possible way. Even with increased support in Vancouver this season, it is the two Island clubs which are attracting the fans. Even with Nanaimo's lowly position, it is a safe bet to state that the Coal City will outdraw some of the Mainland entries and that the combined attendance total of the Island Clubs will be far greater than that of the three Mainland entries.

Nanaimo is potentially a fine lacrosse town and it should be kept in the Inter-City Lacrosse League. The loss will be to the sport if Nanaimo has to drop out. A little more concentration on the future and less on the win-at all costs attitude will pay bigger dividends in the end.

All-Stars' Outlook Good For Match With Fulham

Victoria All-Stars will give a good account of themselves during the exhibition match against Fulham, touring English football team, if yesterday's match between the Probables and the Possibles can be taken as an indication.

Both teams turned in fine exhibitions featured by sharp passing plays. With the players on both clubs fighting hard for the honor of representing the city in the coming match, the game turned out to be one of the best of the season.

Possibles took a 2-1 lead during the first half while playing with the sun and wind at their backs but were unable to hold their advantage in the second half and dropped the decision, 5-2.

ALL PLAYED WELL

It would be hard to pick the stars of the game as nearly all the players turned in sound performances.

Big John Pickburn received the unusual honor of playing for both teams. He started at centre-half for the Possibles but was transferred to right half for the Probables when Bob Allch sprained his ankle early in the game.

Ken Sneddon, a junior player from Veterans of France, played the entire match at outside right for the Possibles and turned in an excellent game particularly during the first half. He made the play on one of the goals.

Probables took the lead at the 25-minute mark of the first period. Ed Hardy made a fine save of Ab Travis' hard shot but the ball rebounded to Wallace Milligan who headed it into the open net. Possibles tied the count on a nice goal by Don McGee and then took the lead when Ken Griffin headed Sneddon's centre past Joe Travis.

COUNT TIED

Probables tied the count early in the second half on a goal by Ab Travis. Colin Robb, Milligan and Stan Robbins scored later, in that order, to give the Probables the victory.

Line-ups follow:

Probables: J. Travis, Henry, Joe Robbins, Allen, Sid Robbins, K. Williams, Robb, Don McGee, Milligan, Rob. A. Travis.

Possibles—Hardy, Hendry, Hope, Fallon, Pickburn, C. Robbins, Sneddon, Walker, Griffin, Don McGee, Tim Walker, Murray Reeller, Frances Johnny, [illegible]

Diamond Sculls Trial Satisfies Toronto Youth

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England, June 2 (CP)—Jack Guest Jr., Canada's top-ranking junior oarsman, breezed through a trial spin of more than four miles over Henley Reach yesterday in the new racing shell he hopes will carry him to victory in the Diamond Sculls next month.

The 18-year-old Toronto sculling prodigy, who arrived in England a week ago with his father, winner of the event in 1930, said he was highly satisfied with the test performance.

Built by a world-famous London firm, the shell is 27 feet four inches long and 12½ inches wide, considerably larger than the dimensions for the average racing craft. But young Jack's powerful build—205 pounds on a six-foot, 5¼-inch frame—called for a custom-made job.

Soccer League Re-Elects Bottom Clubs

LONDON, June 2 (Reuters)—Crystal Palace and Watford, bottom clubs in the English soccer league's third division southern last season, were re-elected to league membership today.

But a meeting of the Football League here ruled out New Brighton, bottom club in the northern section, and replaced it with Workington, a Cumberland outfit. Accrington Stanley was re-elected to the northern section.

The league decided to raise maximum players' salaries from £12 to £14 weekly during the playing season. Off-season maximum remained at £10.

New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox moved a game closer in the American League yesterday as the Chicago White Sox ran into unexpected trouble against Philadelphia Athletics and saw their winning streak ended after 15 games.

The White Sox lost a 5-1 decision to Bob Hooper, with three former teammates—Gus Zernial, Wally Moses and Dave Philley—playing a big part in the victory.

The A's made all of their five hits count. Gus Zernial got the first hit off Joe Dobson in the fifth—his eighth home run. Then, in the seventh, the A's broke up the game with a four-hit attack which produced as many runs.

Zernial drew a walk and Philley singled. After a sacrifice, Pete Suder was purposely walked to load the bags. Moses plated the winning run although his ground ball forced Suder at second. Phillley and Moses then worked a double steal for the second run. A pop fist in the sun and two more singles sent in two more runs.

WITHIN GAME

The Yanks crept within a game, but only after a struggle which saw them end a four-game losing streak. They defeated Detroit Tigers 8-7 in 12 innings when Yogi Berra connected for a home run with two out. The teams set some dubious records. The Yanks used 20 players, the Tigers 19 and the combined total became a new league record. The game lasted four hours and 27 minutes, also believed to be a new mark. Allie Reynolds, last of six New York pitchers, received credit.

The Red Sox got back into winning form with a 6-1 victory over St. Louis Browns. Expert relief pitching by Willard Nixon, who allowed only two hits in the last four innings, saved the victory for Harry Taylor. The Sox broke a 4-4 deadlock in the sixth on doubles by Bobby Doerr and Dom DiMaggio and added a clincher on Lou Beaudreau's eighth-inning single.

GOOD FOR TEN

Cleveland Indians made four homers good for ten runs as they walloped Washington 12-4 for their sixth straight victory. The Indians played errorless ball for the ninth straight game to equal the American League record set by the 1939 Yankees.

Brooklyn Dodgers stretched their National League lead to three games by edging Cincinnati 2-1, while the second-place St. Louis Cardinals dropped their second straight to Philadelphia Phils 5-2. Duke Snider's 12th home run and Ralph Branca's five-hit pitching brought the Dodgers their victory, and the Phils fashioned their win behind two-run hits by Granny Hamner and veteran Ken Heintzelman.

Chicago Cubs and New York Giants pulled into a virtual third-place tie with Boston Braves. The Cubs spoiled Boston's celebration of the 75th anniversary of the National League by taking a 7-5 decision from the Braves. Jim Hearn scattered four hits and walloped a two-run homer to pace the Giants to a 14-3 triumph over Pittsburgh.

Combines' Ace Forward Clings to Scoring Lead

Jim Anderson, star Vancouver Combines forward, has grimly hung onto his four-point lead in the Inter-City Lacrosse League's individual scoring race for the third straight week.

Anderson picked up two goals and two assists during the past week to run his total to 30 points on 24 goals and six assists. Archie Browning, Victoria Shamrocks' forward, remained four points behind Anderson by scoring three goals and an assist last week. He now has 26 points on 20 goals and six assists.

Shamrocks Norm Baker and Whitey Severson stayed in the third and fourth spots. Baker has 25 points and Severson 23.

TOP GOALIE

Red Andrews of Shamrocks is still the league's top goalie. Andrews upped his percentage one point during the week. He now has a .77 percentage after stopping 171 out of 223 shots fired his way.

Stan Josephs of North Shore Indians and New Westminster's Preston are tied for the runner up honors with .71 percentages. Josephs has appeared in six games while Preston has played in only four.

The battle for the dubious honor of being the league's bad man is close. Victoria's Art Green is leading with 24 minutes in penalties, while North Shores' M. Crema, L. Crema and Johnson are tied with 23 minutes. Baker and Jake Fiacco of Commandos have 22 minutes each.

Dropping three points—for a 32 at the 200-yard mound and one point with the first shot at 500 yards, the veteran marksman then filled his card with 13 consecutive bullseyes to tally 34 points at 500 yards and a 35-point possible at 600 yards.

Sparring Partner Hit, But Boy Falls

POMPTON LAKES, N.J., June 2 (AP) — Joe Louis staggered a sparring partner so hard with a right-hand punch today that an eight-year-old fell out of a nearby tree.

When the former heavyweight champion caught Jack Flood with a terrific right, Rudolph became so excited he lost his balance. The boy hit a limb on the way down to the ground and was not injured. After shaking hands with Louis and getting a free ice cream cone, he went away a very happy youngster.

Dave McKenzie Asked to Coach Crusaders XV

Preliminary plans for formation of a new English rugby football club were made at a recent meeting at the University School.

The club, to be known as the Crusaders, will cater to young players who are not already members of existing clubs and have no particular reason for joining them. Dave McKenzie, former Scottish international player, has been asked to act as coach.

The club will use the University School ground as its home field. Financial backing has been assured to start the club.

An inaugural meeting will be held at the University School on Friday at 8 p.m. when McKenzie will give a talk on rugby to all interested.

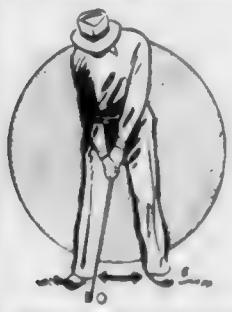
Golf--- Here's How

By SAM SNEAD
Golf's Greatest Player-Teacher



Here's a point [illegible] means the power [illegible] low flight. This is a [illegible] shot against a [illegible] to minimize the [illegible] when a lofted wood [illegible] high ball would give [illegible] powerful feel and [illegible] the wide stance called for [illegible] woods and long irons. [illegible] a slight open stance with the ball [illegible] a little farther back of the [illegible] direction line than [illegible] the right. The player should make this swing as precisely the same way as he would swing any long wood club with the principal difference that he'll be careful to be just short of horizontal at the top of the back swing. This makes it easier to bring the club face back to exact contact with the ball. In shooting a long iron usually you're shooting for the green and precision is a big factor. This player is starting right. The flight should be good.

Proponents of Empire Winter Games Want Canada to Start Ball Rolling

AUCKLAND, N.Z., June 2 (CP) — Now that the 1954 Empire games have been officially awarded to Vancouver and planning is under way, winter sports enthusiasts here and in Australia are again asking about the prospects of Canada organizing an Empire winter games tournament, on the lines of the Olympic winter games.

Enthusiasts in the southern dominions have long felt that the initiative in inaugurating such a meeting must come from Canada, as the sports included in winter Olympics are stronger and more highly organized in Canada than in any other Commonwealth country. It is felt here that as Canada is to be host for the summer Empire games in 1954, the preceding winter would be a propitious time to launch Empire winter games.

STRONGEST

Skiing is the most strongly organized of the winter Olympics sports in Australia and New Zealand and the ski organizations of the two countries have already established inter-dominion team contests on a firm basis. The controlling body in New Zealand even made a bid to have skiing included in the main Empire Games in 1950. On that occasion New Zealand as the host country, had the right to nominate two additional sports outside the standard program. This effort failed and since then ski enthusiasts have turned increasingly to the idea of a separate Empire winter games, perhaps using the biennial inter-dominion skiing contests as a basis from which to work.

These contests between Australia and New Zealand began before the war and have been uniformly successful. On one occasion a triangular meeting was arranged with United States representatives competing, but attempts to include a Canadian team have so far been fruitless.

CUT BY WAR

The Anzac meetings were abandoned during the World War but have been re-established on a stronger basis than before. The last contest was in 1949, when an Australian team visited New Zealand. This year New Zealand is sending a team to Australia.

Skiing has been booming in the southern dominions since the war. In New Zealand progress has been particularly rapid and it now has considerably more ski tows than its larger neighbor. New Zealand has higher mountains and much more varied terrain than Australia and the installation of tows by private companies, the government and many clubs has resulted in a rapid improvement in the standard.

There is no doubt, however, that the standard in Canada is still much higher and facilities infinitely better. No resort in the southern dominions for instance, has anything more advanced than simple rope tows.

FEW RINKS

Ice skating, which ranks as an outdoor sport practised on frozen lakes in the south in New Zealand, but there are only a few artificial rinks in Australia. Chief competition in this and in ice hockey would have to come from Great Britain as the sided southern standard does not approach that of Canada. Curling, however, is extensive on the southern lakes of New Zealand.

Introduction of an empire winter games would undoubtedly give all these sports a great boost in Australasia and New Zealand.

Exchange Tourney

[illegible] change will hold its third annual golf tournament June 15 at Royal Colwood golf course. The tournament will be followed by a dinner at which prizes will be awarded. Dinner entertainment will be provided.

Teen Tastes In Clothes

By DEE LAVOIE
Victoria High School

Now is the time of year when so many high schoolgirls find themselves making the rounds of the local business firms in search of either summer, or, for many '51 grads, permanent employment.

You'll probably be giving some thought to how you can make that so important first impression on the man behind the desk a good one so could want your job hunting outfit to show what a neat, efficient and really promising person you are.

Top choice for many a gal for wearing to these interviews is a tailor suit. Favorites this season have been, in color, navy, in fabric gabardine, in style tailored, but there are many attractive variations. Fine tune the pretty grey flannel suit, or the new finely checked one often set off with accents of solid color.

CHANGE-ABOUTS

Necklines especially the versatile wing collar take to brightening up with scarves on most of the high style suits, and a new touch is the plain collarless buttoned high jacket to dress with a scarf, a separate collar or the turned down collar of a blouse.

So mix'n'matchable are the suits that combine a boxy jacket, that's right with everything else in your wardrobe with a straight modern skirt that also leads a life of its own.

If it's a warm and balmy day that a teener chooses to meet the managers, she'll likely wear a crisp cotton dress. Wattle pique leads the field and comes in the fashiest pastel colors. Trimming is usually frosty white for a cool look.

DARK COTTONS

Bound to go over with the personnel people are prints of cotton (sometimes with a sheen finish) dresses in the darker shades. White trimming notes, probably pique or ruffle eyelet embroidery go perfectly on the dark. Navy is a good choice for background. And one of these would be smart for on the job, after you've landed it.

To add the finishing touch, gloves, shoes, purse, and maybe a hat will require some thought. With a summery cotton crocheted or sheerest nylon gloves look lovely with a suit more tailored ones are the choice. One of the new head hugging little hats of white pique braid, suede, or velvet would be a fine touch or, if you prefer, go bare-headed. (You wouldn't really want a 'kerchief now, would you?)

Now go ahead and face those formidable personnel managers with confidence, cause you know you look your smartest!

Drama Club Production Aids Junior Red Cross

By HELEN CHESNUT
S. J. Willis Junior High School

Drama Club members and Red Cross representatives have been busy for weeks selling five-cent tickets for the Drama Club production on May 29 and 30. The Junior Red Cross sponsored this extremely successful production. The varied program was very well attended by enthusiastic students.

At the beginning of the Wednesday program, Dave Ridout, IX-B presented Miss McNab, the Drama Club and Junior Red Cross sponsor, with a beautiful bouquet. Miss McNab replied that this was the first time she had ever been "dragged out" on stage, and that she was extremely proud of her capable cast of players.

The program began with "O, Canada," played by the school band, and explanatory remarks by Marion Roome, VIII-A. Then came the first play, entitled "The Black Brothers," from the novel "King of the Golden River." The prologue and epilogue were done by Joan Chapman, VII-A. The three brothers Schwartz, Hans and Gluck—were played by Mickey Muir, IX-B, Gene Diepecker, IX-B, and Joan Smyth, VII-F, while Donnegail Middleton, VII-F, ably filled the role of the Southwest Wind. Other leading characters were portrayed by Barbara Geddes, VII-A, Marlene King, VII-F, Sandra Dicks, VII-B, Patricia Elliot, VII-B, Eileen Moore, VII-B, Joanne Dawson, VII-A, and June Blackwell, VII-F. The highly essential role of prompter was capably filled by Dave Ridout, IX-B, and Margaret Coppin, IX-A, was in charge of properties and costumes.

SINGERS HEARD

In between the two plays selections were sung by the Girls' Club and piano were played by the school band.

Next on the program was a play entitled "The Fan," with explanatory remarks by Marion Roome, VIII-A. In this play leading characters Mrs. Forres (Barbara Lawrence, VII-A, and Marianne Mathews, IX-A. The supporting roles of Jenny, Miss Pine and Miss Smith were played by Dianne Nygard, VII-A, Dorothy Hutton, IX-D, and Doreen Wilkins, IX-D. Dianne Roskelly, VIII-B, acted as prompter and also was in charge of properties. The program ended with "The King" played by the band.

Although all proceeds went in aid of the Junior Red Cross, the students who worked so hard to make this a success were well rewarded by the splendid turnout and the enthusiasm of their fellow students.

Softball Season Open

By BARBARA SANSON
Central Junior High School

The girls' softball team won an outstanding victory over the Esquimalt High School girls on Thursday afternoon. With Lois Newell pitching, Bonnie Herbert catching, and a few sensational catches in the field throughout the game, our team was off to a roaring start in its first game of the season. Final score—20-8.

Under the direction of Miss Ferguson, the Grade VIII girls are practising their "fashion walk" in preparation for the fashion show to be held on June 13. At this affair they will model the dresses they made in their home economics period.

Mothers and other distinguished guests will be present.

Thirty Grade IX girls visited Royal Jubilee Hospital on Wednesday in connection with vocational guidance. They toured the hospital and were able to get a first-hand view of what a job in the nursing profession would be like.

In recognition of their services to the school and community, boys of the Traffic Patrol will attend for a picnic at the Esquimalt Police Station on Sunday. Some of the outstanding members of Central patrolmen McLean, Robertson, Weakes, McHaffie, Eastman, Walker, Gay and Jackson. These boys have done a good job on two of the busiest crossings in Victoria, accurately and courteously recognizing which time be [illegible]

Lockout Appeal Decision Due, Board Reports

A decision will be made this week as to whether an appeal will be granted against the decision of a lockout charge against Builders' Sash and Door Ltd. the Labor Relations' Board reported.

The judgment by Magistrate H. C. Hall was to the effect that ten men involved in the case were not employees of the Victoria company at the time of the alleged offense and therefore could not be locked out.

The men were members of local 1118 International Wood workers of America (CIO-CCL), which launched the prosecution.

Look to Your Flooring

The virtues of a well laid and serviceable floor need no explanation to the Canadian home owner. A good floor is its own best advertisement. It is easy to keep clean and its appearance is an important part of the decorative scheme of the house exterior. On the other hand, a floor that develops cracks and irregularities after laying is unsightly, requires best care, dirt creates underfoot and is a lasting source of exasperation and disappointment.

N.H.A. REQUIREMENTS

The following requirements for flooring in homes built under the N.H.A. establish good building practice you'll want to follow whether you build under the act or with private financing.

Adequate support must be provided for all ends of sub-flooring.

[illegible] the sub-flooring may be omitted providing the joist spacing does not exceed [illegible] and the flooring is [illegible] not less than 2 1/2 inch tongued and grooved [illegible] No. 2 grade or better or [illegible] engineered [illegible].

[illegible] should be [illegible] with 2 x [illegible] spaced [illegible] at other bearings and 12" or intermediate supports.

Workers Say Victorians Pleasant, Receptive to Census

The count will help Mr. Dobie to determine the peak traffic flow on various routes and the volume of traffic entering and leaving the city at peak periods.

He said the count would enable him to get some factual conditions on a long-term basis.

He said some of the workers were "finding it a bit tough" and encountered a fair number of "call backs" — people who went out when their homes were visited.

Milk Delivery Tests Unlikely in Victoria

AROUND TOWN

LEAD AROUND TOWN — 13 — MILK DELIVERY —

Victoria likely won't have a test of every-other-day milk delivery as is planned by six dairies at Vancouver.

We would like to see it because our distribution costs could be cut, but the public here hasn't sufficient refrigerators, it seems, and there are many independent distributors who forget not obey the rule, a city distributor said.

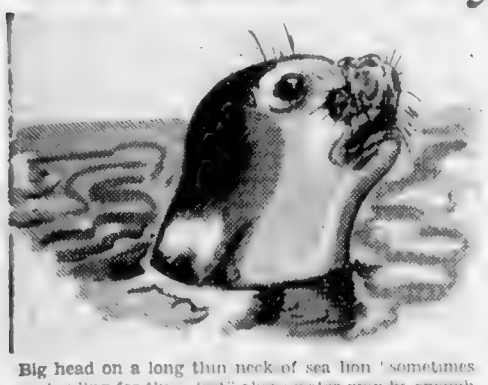
Debunker Says Caddy's Sea Lions



Big head on a long thin neck of sea lion "sometimes protruding for three feet" above water may be enough to start "Caddy" notions in some folks' heads, according to veteran observer of Vancouver Island waters George Nicholson. He says this sight "with the help of a little imagination," could lead to descriptions of heads like "a camel, horse or legendary dragon."

Weird shaped waterlogged snag is "Caddie" to some naive folk, debunker Nicholson claims. His illustration has two "heads," some reports have listed three. The snag bobs up every once in a while to tantalize the Caddy-conscious, he insists. People who have seen the sea serpent don't pay any attention to this sort of evidence. They may be right.

One is a lone seal or a lone sea lion [illegible] breaking water and [illegible] head for a [illegible] around. Another is a weird shaped waterlogged snag floating just under the surface and every so often bobbing up to show its fantastic shape as it drifts along in the swirls of a rip tide. The third, and actually more like the real thing than anything, is a group of sea lions on their way to or from their feeding grounds.

Visitors See Cowichan Ayrshires

Two prominent Ayrshire breeders from the Old Country were visitors to the Cowichan district last week and on Thursday the Vancouver Island Ayrshire Club held a luncheon in their honor at the Commercial Hotel in Duncan.

Mr. W. H. Stokes, past president of the Ayrshire Society of England and Wales, and owner of the well-known herds at Lydney, Gloucestershire, Marine, Worcestershire, and Stranraer, Dumfriesshire, has been visiting Ayrshire breeding establishments throughout the United States, planned to visit Canada on Wednesday for a two-week stay on the Island. He was accompanied by Mrs. Stokes and his son, Mr. Lionel Stokes.

The other visitor, Mr. W. M. Aldersey, Eccles Hall, Worcester, England, is here on a seven-week stay. He is visiting his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Aldersey, very prominent in Duncan.

Mrs. J. O. Cameron

"Personality of the Week"

By EILEEN LEAROYD

Mrs. J. O. Cameron is one of Victoria's most active music patrons. Over a score of years she has probably done as much [illegible] single person in the city.

Mrs. Cameron, who has passed her sixth birthday and is now confined to a wheelchair, still attends every concert given by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, and is one of the society's most enthusiastic supporters.

Since 1921 Mrs. Cameron has been a member of the Musical Arts Society. At that time it was called the Ladies' Musical Club, and was instrumental in bringing such musical "greats" to Victoria as Mark Hambourg, Lazar Lehman, Sigismund Beck, Pablo Casals, Clara Butt, Eugene Ysaye, Fritz Kreisler, Anna Case, Efrem Zimbalist, Kathleen Parlow, John McCormack, Louis Graveure and Percy Grainger.

In everything but name she was an impressario.

In the early days of the Musical Club she did a little executive work, all the publicity, besides carrying out the job by writing many of the concert reviews as well.

It was definitely a labor of love for Mrs. Cameron was personally helped by a number of young artists and helped in getting them started on musical careers. One of the pianists she helped was Ramond Hosmon, who, it is hoped, will be heard with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

"Yes," said Mrs. Cameron, nodding her head. "I suppose she could say that I have given my life to music here, but it has been very satisfying."

She is still on the committee of the Musical Arts Society, and some years ago was made honorary president of that organization for life.

SOUTHERN BELLE

Mrs. Cameron, nee Beatrix Freeman, was a real "southern belle" for she was born in Brownsville, Tennessee, daughter of Judge A. A. Freeman and Mrs. Freeman. She began playing the piano and the violin at the age of eight and carried on her studies right through her school days in Washington, D.C., and in New Mexico.

She married J. O. Cameron, a lawyer, in New Mexico in 1894. Her [illegible] and her father [illegible] 1905 when they came to live in Victoria. [illegible] became prominent in the affairs of the Cameron Lumber Company.

"[illegible] four children. Wyatt, twins, Donald and George. Mrs. Cameron has eight grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

OTHER INTERESTS

While music has played such a tremendous part in her life, Mrs. Cameron has also had a number of other interests.

She was a member of the Canadian Authors' Association for years, she was a member of the Auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A. and president for some time, she was a member of the Canadian Club and a member of the Air Cadets as well as the Women's Auxiliary Air Service.

In fact years ago Mrs. Cameron wrote a column on the stage and screen for The Daily Colonist. She also wrote many articles on musical subjects, reviews and poems.

In June, 1949, she donated the bandstand in Beacon Hill Park which gives pleasure to so many people.

"It's built solidly," Mrs. Cameron says. "It will stand for good and all."

In 1936 Mrs. Cameron made a tour of Europe in three months. In London she saw 28 concerts, and plays. She visited Europe again in 1938 with her husband and in 1939 they made [illegible]

HER RECIPE

Mrs. Cameron gives a recipe famous in the south and it is for Virginia Spoon Bread.

One cup corn meal, ¼ cup flour, 1 cup milk, 2 eggs, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons butter, 2 teaspoons baking powder.

Put corn meal in bowl with enough boiling water to make a stiff mush, then add butter and let it cool. When cold add eggs well beaten, salt, baking powder and flour sifted together; then add the milk. Bake in a well-greased casserole for one hour in 375 degree oven.

AMM-I-DENT HELPS REDUCE TOOTH DECAY because it is AMMONIATED

Further Proof Provided

The ability of ammoniated dentifrices to reduce tooth decay was proved further by reports of new, extensive clinical tests. These tests proved conclusively that ammoniated dentifrices gave greater protection against tooth decay than any method of brushing with ordinary dentifrice.

Give yourself, your whole family, the benefits of Amm-i-dent. Why wait a single day. Change to Amm-i-dent Tooth Paste or Tooth Powder now. Start the children also on this road to better dental health.

Change From Your Present Tooth Paste to Amm-i-dent That Helps Reduce Tooth Decay

How many cavities did the dentist find on the teeth of your family in [illegible]? How many fillings were removed? Are you sure of using the tooth [illegible] when those cavities occurred?

Other people — millions of them — have changed to the ammoniated formula. Amm-i-dent has evidence of many Amm-i-dent users whose dentists did not find a single new cavity on their 1950 check-up.

Amm-i-dent Effect Continues for Hours

The active ingredients in ammoniated dentifrices are Dibasic Ammonium Phosphate and Carbamide — and Amm-i-dent contains more of them than other brands. The ammoniating effect of Amm-i-dent continues for hours after its use. Just follow your usual brushing habits.

So don't wait. Change away from the tooth paste you were using while present cavities occurred. Change to Amm-i-dent Ammoniated Tooth Paste.

MONEY CLAIMED

The Canadian Army received a bill last week from a former prisoner of war in Canada for $25 he said he left with a government department when he was interned.

Translated from German the letter reads: "The undersigned would like to receive a credit note for the $25 he deposited while he was a prisoner of war."

Receipt of the letter raised a few amused smiles at Army headquarters. "I suppose everyone wants money these days," one officer said.

Whether or not the ex-prisoner of war gets his money, doesn't rest with the army. The letter was passed to the appropriate government department for action—if any.

Frame Building Refused In Taxpayers' Interests

Oak Bay's refusal to accept a frame and stucco building for its new Junior High school is not an attempt to retard school building but to protect the children and save the taxpayers money, [illegible] said.

"I believe there will be a satisfactory solution to the problem in the near future," he said, but that solution lies now with the school board. We understand their problem, but they have to take care of the children.

Oak Bay refused the concrete based frame buildings on the grounds that it was contrary to its building by-law.

He [illegible] said he believed the school board and the provincial government were interested in Oak Bay's proposal for a concrete permanent type school.

"We are purely looking the long view," he said. "The [illegible] of a permanent [illegible] building is [illegible] and the taxpayers [illegible] over the years.

He said the expense of the Junior High School [illegible] and Windsor and Monterey of [illegible] tenancy during their long lives.

Mayor Cole Bay pointed out that it would be better to have a frame and stucco school than none at all, he said.

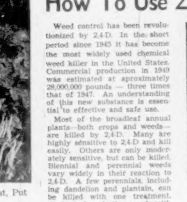
How To Use 2,4-D Safely On Weeds



If You Cannot Use All the Beans You Harvest, Pot Them Up for Winter.

Weed control has been revolutionized by 2,4-D. In the short period since 1945 it has become the most widely used chemical weed killer in the United States. Commercial production in 1949 was estimated at approximately 28,000,000 pounds — three times that of 1947. An understanding of this new substance is essential for effective and safe use.

Most of the broadleaf annual plants—both crops and weeds—are killed by 2,4-D. Many are highly sensitive to 2,4-D and kill easily. Others are only moderately sensitive, but can be killed. Biennial and perennial weeds vary widely in their reaction to 2,4-D. A few perennials including dandelion and plantain, can be killed with one treatment. Curly dock and other weeds with taproots are harder to kill. 2,4-D usually kills the foliage of broadleaf perennials that have grown out of rootstocks, such as milkweed and Canada thistle. Repeated spraying of the new growth may be needed to kill all the roots and rootstocks.

The various crop plants react differently to 2,4-D — just as do weeds. Perennial grasses are generally resistant, and broadleaf plants are usually susceptible. Garden vegetables and grains, without chemical protection, are highly sensitive, and no plant is entirely resistant. Even crop plants considered tolerant, and most young plants, can be injured severely by an overdose. Since most perennial grasses are unharmed by 2,4-D treatment and white clover (including Ladino) is tolerant, the broadleaf weeds can be killed or controlled with 2,4-D among grasses and in white or Ladino clover-grass pastures and lawns. The use of 2,4-D for weed control in small grains, corn and other crops in the grass family has been very successful.

The effect of 2,4-D on crop plants is influenced by the type and, the stage of their growth, and differences in susceptibility within the species.

Weed Control in Corn by Pre-emergence Treatment With 2,4-D. Right—3 Rows Treated; Left Rows Untreated.

Seedlings of some plants an be killed easily, but as they approach maturity, killing is more difficult. Different corn hybrids have been found to vary from susceptible to resistant. Flax is generally sensitive, but the range of reaction between commercial varieties is wide.

The dosage for spraying weeds in growing crops depends on what the crops will tolerate. Weeds can sometimes be controlled satisfactorily without being killed. Those that are stunted offer less competition to crop plants for moisture and food.

Pre-emergency weed control is one of the most promising developments since the discovery of 2,4-D. By spraying the soil before the weeds break through, the ground many can be killed that are not controlled by later applications. This practice also reduces heavy weed infestations. In the event early cultivation is not possible.

Some of the facts you should know about 2,4-D before using it:

Do not dust from an airplane: 2,4-D dusted from an airplane may drift for miles, killing or damaging susceptible crops such as vegetables, flowers, cotton, etc., on your or your neighbor's farm.

Follow directions closely. 2,4-D is not a cure-all. Study the label on the container. Measure accurately—an overdose may seriously injure even tolerant crops. Clean equipment carefully for leaks. Proper nozzles, accurately adjusted, are the key to safe, thorough spraying.

Apply at the right time. 2,4-D is most effective when plants are in active growth. Safeguard sensitive plants and do not apply dilute spray solutions when the vegetation is wet with rain or dew. Avoid windy days for dusting and spraying.

Use separate sprayer for 2,4-D. Minute quantities of 2,4-D left in a sprayer to be used later for insecticides or fungicides will damage sensitive plants. Clean the sprayer thoroughly with ammonia or activated charcoal after using or much better still, use a separate sprayer.

New Beans Give Larger Harvest Of Top Quality

The beans which grandmother called "string beans," now known as "snap beans" because the strings long ago disappeared, are excelled by few other vegetables in the food they produce, for the area occupied. One of the first triumphs of plant breeders in this country was the production of the "stringless" beans, and improvement has continued with remarkable results.

Several new varieties of high merit are now available, of top table quality combined with record yield. They bear round pods, exceptionally long, and filled with nutritious "meaty" tissue if they are picked before the seeds form. They give a large yield because they live longer, being resistant to the plant diseases which shorten the lives of older varieties.

Just keep them picked off so no seeds can form, and you will enjoy beans of superb flavor and tenderness as none except home gardeners can experience.

Never let beans until all danger of frost is over. They are extremely sensitive to cold air and cold soil. Greatest improvement in quality has been made in bush beans, as distinguished from pole beans, though many find the latter excellent if they are picked young.

There are four general types of bush beans, the green and wax (yellow) each divided into flat pod and round pod. Market beans are usually flat pod, which yield better than the round pod, and the latter have the best quality.

Between the green and wax beans there are slight differences in vitamin content, the former excelling in vitamin A, the latter in vitamin B, both both are among our most nutritious foods. In recent years few wax beans have been seen in markets; but in the opinion of many they are more tender and of better flavor than green beans. Both for the table and for canning beans should be picked before seeds form, and no more than an hour before they are cooked.

Canning pod beans requires special precautions to kill the botulinus germ, and before it is attempted the advice of canning experts should be sought.

It may be advisable to estimate your canning needs and sow a special row for putting up, so they can be harvested for that purpose. But always be ready to pick up a few here at a time, when there are more beans on the bushes than you need for the table.

Make Salad Bowl Daily Of Fresh Crisp Lettuce

THERE is no better way to make sure your family has a daily dose of Vitamin A, calcium, and other nutritious ingredients which the "green, leafy" vegetables supply than by serving a daily bowl salad.

Famous chefs pride themselves on their salads. One was cooked salad may be served every day at dinner with a great variety of nutritious ingredients produced in the Liberty garden.

Leaf lettuce is preferred by most chefs over head lettuce, for salads. It is also far richer in vitamins. It comes in two types—the butter leaves, and the crisp leaves. The butter leaves are thicker, and darker green, with finer flavor, the experts say. Crisp leaves are lighter green in color, thin, and somewhat brittle. Examples are Black Seeded Simpson, a butter type, and Grand Rapids, a crisp leaf type. Experts give first place in their esteem to the butter leaves.

Romaine or cos lettuce, which produces oval leaves, standing upright, is highly esteemed by French salad experts. It is a good late lettuce, standing heat better than the leaf varieties. The leaves can be blanched by tying them up as they near maturity, but this merely changes their color, and lessens their vitamin content.

For summer leaves, chicory, also known as endive, is more valuable than lettuce, which usually runs to seed in midsummer. Endive may be had from early June to early fall leaves. Many like the curly leaved type for summer, some broad leaves (escarolle) for fall, and some broad and fine and sweeter after the frost comes. Sow both types in drills, thin out to six or eight inches.

Leaf crops grown in a similar manner, and much esteemed in bowl salads, include corn salad, which is very hardy and can be harvested late in the fall, and upland garden cress, which is a pungent flavor in the salad.

In the fall lettuce may be grown again, and the Chinese cabbage may be grown in the spring, with fall sown and an early start. But in midsummer, it always runs to seed. A late crop has no such tendency, and heads are easily produced in the fall, from plants started in late June.

Radioactive Houseflies

Refuting the old belief that houseflies confine their activities to the area surrounding their birthplace, experiments conducted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture showed that a housefly can pick up disease germs in a diseased neighborhood and carry them to a victim four miles away in less than one day.

Commenting on these tests, C.I.L. Agricultural News says that the flies used in the experiment were first sprinkled with phosphorous, released at a central point and collected in baited traps at various distances from the centre. The captured insects were then tested for infectivity with a Geiger counter.

Some insects which were found as far away as four miles from where they were released were infective. Others which were by no means "stay-at-homes."

Gardening Hints

For an annual that will grow anywhere, sow Shirley poppies. It will flourish in poor soil, good soil, moist, dry, sunny or shady locations.

* * *

Keep all newly planted shrubs, evergreens, perennials and roses well watered at this time so that the roots will not dry out.

* * *

Chrysanthemums can be made into bushy plants by pinching. Pinch carefully until the middle of June and then allow the shoots to grow. Bushy plants bloom best.

The Legend of Sherlock Holmes

By HARRY WILLIAMS

THE author who creates a character that leaps so vividly to life and captures the imagination of the reading public so completely that it eclipses its creator, regards it with mixed feelings. He finds himself dogged by the image of his own Frankenstein. Perhaps fortunately for writers it is not a common occurrence. Lorna Doone springs immediately to mind — one has to think hard to remember the name of her creator — but probably the most outstanding example of a character-creative life is that given of amateur detectives, Sherlock Holmes. His name has a more familiar ring than that of the man who conceived him. His reality remains uncannily unchanged to this day, while in the by-day of his fame, sixty years ago, he belonged to thousands of readers in many parts of the world, he lived and breathed.

Holmes received threatening letters, love letters and wild proposals of marriage; and when Conan Doyle — having built his over-popular puppet—hurled him to his death over Reichenbach Falls (actually in the area of Sir arch enemy Professor Moriarity, the popular author was sure that the wizard of Baker Street had killed him, and he resurrected.

BACK TO LIFE

Doyle's public refused to allow Holmes to perish, and reluctantly —and for almost the only time in his great series of stories, unconvincingly—the author brought him back to life. It is true, as a witty critic remarked at the time, "he was never the same thing afterwards," but many thousands of readers felt only in Britain, but also in the United States, Canada and Australia signed their relief at his reappearance.

To understand the brain-child it is as well to know something of the man whose brain conceived it. Arthur Conan Doyle was born in Edinburgh in 1859, and went to the university of that city at the age of sixteen. There he met two outstanding men who influenced his whole life; Joseph Bell, a professor with so incisive a mind and such startling powers of deduction that he is undoubtedly the prototype of Sherlock Holmes; and Rutherford who was later to be translated, through the medium of ink, to the personality of Professor Challenger, the outstanding central figure of "The Lost World."

FIRST AMBITION

Conan Doyle decided to be a writer, and a hard time he had of it. Ship's doctor on an Arctic whaler, then a tramp as a ship's doctor in a West African trader, a surgeon on the front during the Boer War, he settled down after his marriage to put up his plate at Southsea and found it not entirely non-lucrative. Moving to Devonshire Place, in London, proved a decisive step, for there he had no patients at all, and was compelled to write in order to keep the wolf from the door. Happily he kept it at bay so satisfactorily that he took the bold step of moving to South Norwood in order to concentrate on his literary efforts.

In his early days Doyle had admired the work of Edgar Allen Poe—the real father of the detective story. Poe's detective, Dupuin, in "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," fired his imagination, and the stories of Gaboriau, the Frenchman, also devoted to crime and its detection, gave him his final inspiration. He felt convinced his wife felt; Joseph Bell, a professor with so incisive a mind and such startling powers of deduction that he is undoubtedly the prototype of Sherlock Holmes; Rutherford who was later to be translated, through the medium of ink, to the personality of Professor Challenger, the outstanding central figure of "The Lost World."

Watson is perfect. "It seemed to me that the more in my own mind were gradually clearing out, and I began to have a dim, vague perception of the truth" — when Watson reaches that stage the reader may be fairly sure that he himself has reached the heart of the mystery. and of the story.

BAKER STREET

"A Study in Scarlet," the book in which these two famous characters first meet and take up residence together at that famous address, 221B Baker Street, first appeared in Beeton's Annual in 1886, and the rooms in which the two lived could be rented at that time so far forgot himself as to get married, are described in some detail.

"We inspected the rooms at 221B Baker Street, of which I had spoken at our meeting. They consisted of a couple of comfortable bedrooms and a single, airy sitting room, cheerfully furnished and illuminated by two broad windows."

THE BREIGLARS

That is all, but so curious is the atmosphere of reality which permeates everything to do with Sherlock Holmes that it is difficult to convince people that there never was ever a place as 221B Baker Street. Indeed "The Baker Street Irregulars"—that faithful body of American admirers of the great detective—went so far as to raise money by a plaque to commemorate his place (if evidence. They discovered, to their disgust, that the restaurant, in which Watson and Holmes were supposed to have met it now a milk bar, and that the block of buildings in which the flat must have been situated, if ever it had existed, was a desolate bomb site. But perhaps that is as well. The imagination must be an at prompt site, whatever it may.

Holmes' deductive powers, applied to the solution of (to all seeming impossibility, were not, in fact, impossible. Still, to those shrewdly founded that the official forces of many countries—no doubt with due caution—adopted the theory of deductive reasoning based on mere, dreams, and it seem obvious.

Although Holmes appeared first in fiction, it is to that fine magazine, The Strand, now, unfortunately no longer where it that he owes his great success. "The Bertillon Inquiry, which produced "The Red-Headed League," "The Adventure of the Speckled Band," "The Adventure of the Bruce Partington Plans," "The Adventure of the Dancing Men," or the macabre twist in "The Devil's Foot," may have an equal, but to my mind it has never yet been eclipsed. These are my favorite stories—with the tremendous duel between Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty, and the novels "A Study in Scarlet," "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Sign of Four" thrown in.

PLANTING AND PRUNING

PROPER planting, pruning and watering are essentials to the success of nursery stock. The ground should be ploughed or spaded deeply. Holes should be large enough so the roots can be placed out without crowding. Soil should be packed firmly around roots so that there are no air spaces and so roots are in tight contact with the soil.

PRUNING—Part of the top of the bush or tree must be pruned at time of planting so as to reduce the amount of top to roots to have to supply with water which they are getting established. See illustrations.

WATERING—Surface sprinkling does very little good. Take nozzle off hose and let water run around plant until ground is saturated to the root depth of 12 to 18 inches. Never let ground dry out.

MULCH—A mulch of hay, leaves, grass clippings, etc., around the base of the plant is very beneficial and helps to conserve moisture.

FERTILIZER—Should be placed on top of the ground and worked in with a hoe. Never put fresh manure in the hole, for if it comes in contact with the roots, it will burn and kill them.

Person-to-Person Sketches of Men Who Serve on Ship and Shore in Victoria's Port

By RAY WORMALD

BECAUSE their duties do not allow for prescribed working hours, seafarers rank with the numerous other professions, of course: are "on call" throughout the day and night.

The same situation applies to youthful Captain Jack Stacey, of William Roland Stacey—master of tugs and marine engineer—whose office is located in the new Black Ball Ferry Line building.

Bill, as he is known to shipping and general marine circles on both ports and places, is a comparative newcomer to this city, but already he has added considerably to his circle of friends and business associates.

* * *

Born in Bristol, not far from Brighton, Bill was in Vancouver in 1910 when he was nine years old. After schooling in the Mainland city he started his sea career—when 15½. His apprentice ship was served aboard sailing ships during the Great War—and on long journeys which took him to Australia and the Orient, and back to Vancouver.

After serving in all capacities up to Chief Officer, he spent a number of years in the coastal trade, was foreign going master's certificate in 1937.

He served as master of all types of vessels on the British Columbia and Alaska coasts for a period of 12 years he gained detailed and valuable experience in the tanker, fishing and towing industries, and yacht travel.

* * *

At the outbreak of the World War in September, 1939, Bill joined the Canadian Naval Reserve and served as commanding officer of Canadian ships overseas throughout the hostilities.

For services in screening the "D-Day" landings at Normandy, while commanding officer of H.M.C.S. Saint John, he was awarded the D.S.C. for successful action against enemy submarines. He was also Senior Officer in Dieppe Harbour during the Dieppe raid.

After demobilization in 1945 he spent a short time as master of the Hollywood Park ship, then joined the Canadian Navy as a reserve officer and in the war. Vancouver's naval reserve division, with the rank of Captain, R.C.N. (R).

* * *

Bill came to Victoria late in 1949 to take over the office of the late H. A. Harry Barnett as surveyor to Marine Underwriters. He is responsible for carrying out surveys of all types of vessels, engines, cargoes, docks, ice booms, etc. He delves into details of practically all shipping accidents occurring in the area.

Capt. Stacey and his wife live at 2594 Musgrave Street. They have two fine sons—aged 16 and 4. Jack currently attends Oak Bay High School.

CAPT. WILLIAM R. STACEY

From My Organ Loft

By GRAHAM STEED

I HAVE been reading recently in the Toronto Conservatory of Music Monthly Bulletin a very remarkable letter written from Paris by John Beckwith, one of the younger Canadian musicians, who was born and received his musical training in Mr. Beckwith is continuing his studies in France and has given an account of musical life in that country which will probably surprise many people here, and will perhaps even shock those who are leaders, influences from large musical centres. I hope it may have the latter result—there is so much complacency in every walk of life, and particularly in regard to music, that it is almost shocking to see a young man, with obvious sincerity, set about jogging people out of the ruts. It was in the beginning, is now, and always must be' mutatis mutandis.

* * *

The theme of the letter, if I read it aright, is that life in Canada there is a tremendous amount of work done in bringing musical culture up to the standard of musical culture in Europe and elsewhere; that, in effect, there is a great deal more to be done in Canada than in France, he points out, and that this applies with equal and perhaps even greater force in the United Kingdom, where the pioneer work of introducing new compositions to public notice is done by subsidized organizations, such as the permanent orchestras maintained by broadcasting systems, which have no counterpart in Canada, and he tells us that there are also, in France, well organized societies groups who sponsor and subsidize performances both of the frequently heard works of established composers and the recent compositions of contemporary writers. Moreover he has even found occasional opportunities of hearing music of the first part of the last quarter century—those early outpourings of the romantic movement, those poets who seemed to be so much at variance with the accepted standards, after the War I and who are now regarded as the pioneers in the great development of musical thought in the 20th century.

* * *

In short, and I say this with no air of disparagement, Mr. Beckwith has had his eyes and ears open in Paris and he makes no bones of telling Toronto as he does to us in Canada he is in a good position to do so; as a newcomer to these shores, I should have to be very careful how I would set about comparing Toronto with Paris. One of the things which impressed me most, drama, and I may have to part company with Mr. Beckwith on the question of the fanfare of trumpets which always precedes the performance of any new work by a modern Canadian or American composer. In fact I may as well tell you that I hate fanfares of trumpets preceding any performance.

* * *

Much that is offered to us Canadians in the field of music is so obscure, so lacking in form and outline and undisciplined, that it can only have sprung from the brain of a genius. Mr. Beckwith has probably discovered, from minds which are too in conscious and too in communion with the great stream of former generations, that art, and no revolution has made a complete break with tradition and succeeded in satisfying all the aspirations of humanity. And always he will walk humbly in the presence of the giants of the past. It cannot do so if there are great gaps in our own musical culture, and if you would like to know what kind of gap I mean I would simply reply that the first performance of Beethoven's 9th Symphony and of Bach's St. Matthew Passion here in the capital city of B.C. were only given after the works had been in existence approximately 150 and 220 years, respectively.

* * *

With all our vaunted progress we are not really very up-to-date in matters musical. Mr. Beckwith has been hearing in Paris concerts of chamber music which have included works by Schonberg and Hartok, three such concerts in a month in fact, and he remarks "I don't recall any Toronto musical season in the last six years when more than a half-dozen quartet concerts were to be heard (of Beethoven or Bartok, let alone Bartok or Schonberg." The point of it all is, of course, how often we expect new Canadian music to be of any consequence. Whatever the writers of it are musically starved in their own country and have to go to London or Paris to find out what the score is? In Victoria we have been hearing precisely two concerts of chamber music, one by a well established quartet and the other by four of our best local players, and in each case they approximately six works out of the twenty-four or more compositions for such combinations. Some of the gap is partially filled in Victoria by substituting new recordings, but in what kind of orchestra music are we our children going to grow up, and will there ever be a female pianist of the general public becoming conscious that it is just as normal for musicians to write music as it is for novelists to write books? I agree with the writer of this letter under review, that "we need small groups to make music for themselves and of new music," but would qualify that statement by adding "together with the best of the old." Only with a fairly rounded knowledge of the latter could modern audiences be expected to understand the new trends in musical thought, and to assess the quality of the works now being proposed, and without it not even the best of these works has the remotest chance of survival.

* * *

Space does not permit me to follow Mr. Beckwith's suggestions in regard to opera in this country. Opera is of course an indigenous product to the Italians, and of that matter to the Germans and Italians. It is to do so, as a matter of necessity, only as a social event in London and in a very diminished sense a year in the provincial cities; there is little native genius for opera, and there is, perhaps, no doubt whether things are in any better state for the large Canadian musical centres. In this city we have one night of opera and one night and most glaringly Superior of all, the open operatic arias (more in the Mozart manner) which I will take leave to dispute that there is any future here for that form of art!

* * *

Dr. Peaker's recital at Metropolitan United Church on Saturday at 8:30 will be a notable event for organists, or, in fact, for all musical people. The organ is generally so badly played that all who suffer this form of torture should come to hear the king of instruments in all its glory.

Some people who had difficulty making an overnight column last week will be surprised (or if newspapers reached the Yukon, perhaps not surprised) to find no critical comment on Mr. Peaker's recital here on Saturday.

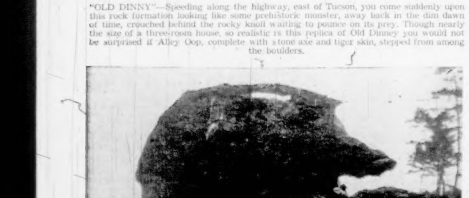
"OLD DINNY"—Speeding along the highway, east of Tucson, you come suddenly upon this rock formation looking like some prehistoric monster, away back in the dim dawn of time, crouched behind the rocky knoll waiting to pounce on its prey. Though nearly the size of a three-room house, so realistic is this replica of Old Dinnyy you would not be surprised if Alley Oop, complete with a stone axe and tiger skin, stepped from among the boulders.



"THUNDERBIRD"—For hundreds of generations before the white man came this Thunderbird of Hornby Island, B.C., kept a watchful eye on his Indian children who came to Tribune Bay fingging clams. Now he turns a stony stare on the white intruder. He has worn a rather startled expression ever since last August, when a group from down Hollywood way picnicked on the bay.

"OLD SCOTCHMAN"—The "Old Scotchman" of Tribune Bay, B.C., is reputed to be the hardest-headed and the toughest Scot in the British Empire. He was waiting this same fall on the night Bobbie Burns was born. This picture was taken the day after "Bobbie Burns Nicht"—Could he haggle on his clan.

Dress Tips: Don't wait 'til the hard weather catches up with you. Have detachable underarm shields tacked in your suits now. . . If you use a leather golf glove, don't stuff it into the pocket of your golf bag. Air it between games and make sure it's dry before putting away.

Health Hints: Many sacroiliac sufferers get fine relief from a regular pole vault kind of most sporting goods stores.

The Off-Center Buckle

Along the Sports Trail

By JOHN BARRINGTON

USUALLY the cinema industry gets itself all starred up every time it tries to put the life of a sports hero on film. Practically every sports fan considers himself an expert and is quick to point out the slightest flaw in the picture.

Studios find themselves deluged with complaints that the high-priced glamour boy who portrays the famous baseball star swings like a fugitive from a girls' softball team. And a girls' softball team.

"Hey, you've got the goal-posts ten yards behind the goal line in that sequence. Everybody knows they don't seem to be right on the line in those days."

Now Hollywood has stuck its neck out again but this time Twentieth Century Fox practically dares anyone to discover a technical error in its film of Babe Ruth. Ben Hogan called "Follow the Sun."

Hogan's story was natural movie fare — so thrilling that if Ben hadn't lived it, it would be laughed out of the theatres as too impossible. It is the tale of a scrawny Texas caddie who became the greatest name in golf, was almost killed in a melodramatic automobile accident, and then made a thrilling comeback to win the national open championship.

FIRST PROBLEM

The first problem encountered in preparing the Hogan story was the question of whether to teach Hogan to act so he could play himself, or teach an actor to play golf.

A few athletes have played themselves in the movies—Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard, Jackie Robinson and a few others. Some others — notably Johnny Mack Brown, John Wayne and Johnny Weissmuller — made the switch from sports to acting a permanent one.

But the studio decided to cast Glenn Ford — not too unlike Hogan physically—as the golfer. However, Hogan "doubled" as himself in the golfing scenes wherever possible. And Bantam Ben also was established as technical director for the film.

In that capacity, it is said he never drove Director Sidney Lanfield to distraction with his attention to the fine points.

When sequences dealing with Hogan's early years, it was Ben who pointed out that it would be a glaring anachronism to use "Ben Hogan" clubs. He said:

"Why should I use a club with my name on it for a scene from the days when nobody had ever heard of me. Get some old Tommy Armour clubs."

On another occasion, he stopped the cameras to demand that actor Ford change a sweater he was wearing. Grunted Ben:

"I never wore a sweater like that in my life."

STUDIED BEN

All this was important. While ordinary movie fans might not notice whether Hogan wore a certain type of sweater or not, golf fans who have seen Hogan play would spot the error quickly.

Ford spent hours watching Ben so that the actor would learn to duplicate every move. He even learned to stand with one leg bent and his weight supported by a club shaft, just the way Hogan does while waiting for an opponent to line up a putt.

The film was shot on several west coast courses. In addition to Bantam Ben, golfers Lloyd Mangrum, Sam Snead, Cary Middleoff and Jimmy Demaret have roles in the film. That should advance the game of golf by at least ten years, although it probably will set acting back about half a century.

VANCOUVER Island's number one timber-cruiser was about to step out into the bush. What a fund of stories Mike King had about the Island's wooded areas. He knew how to tell them, too. In spite of our leg-weariness we sat listening to him far into the night.

Some years later Mike went through a harrowing experience while traversing a part of that Island between Nootka Sound waters and Campbell River. Had he not been of fine physique and with more than the ordinary man's share of spirit he never would have reached the east coast from the distant Nootka point he was forced to start from.

INDIAN DEMANDS

The whole story I never knew. It had something to do, I understand, with a demand by Indian canoemen for payment of money they figured due them. Standing on the shore with the floating canoe some yards away, he had not the kind of cash the natives wanted. Mike said the Indians had asked for a share of the property he was interested in, but he had no legal right to dispose of it at the time. When he offered to give them something extra on return to Nootka the canoemen laughed, said they'd heard the same kind of talk from others. So they pushed away and left him.

HAZARDOUS TRIP

With nothing but an axe and very little food he decided to strike out for Campbell River. It proved a prodigious journey. Fortunately the huckleberries were ripe at the time or he might heat into sight around some jutting headland and rescue him.

SAW A WILD MAN

That some Mike King was a most likeable character. Great favorite of whomever he always had some sort of a story that read well in print. One story in particular would get considerable publicity at times when he returned from a certain part of the Island. "By the lovely dove," he would say, "I saw the wild man again—yes, only a few days ago."

This wild man provided material for numerous colorful stories. There, apparently, had never been any intimate exchanges of talk between the two, the impression gathered by listeners was that there must be some sort of understanding between them, a sort of conspiracy of the bush.

NATIVE LEGEND

It is quite likely Mike King had heard of Vancouver Island's legendary wild man, who according to native legend lived in the Vancouver Island hills. According to the Spaniards, the natives had a name for this wild man. It was Matlox. He was regarded with terror. His body was huge and covered thickly with black bristles, which his head, large and man-shaped, was ghastly in look, especially the mouth part with eye-teeth, sharper and shorter than a bear's molars. The arms were very long and the fingers were tipped with sharp, curving claws, as were the toes.

The chance meetings Mike King reported did not bear out the Spanish accounts and since the story had been passed on nobody else has been favored with a meeting of any description. That does not prove anything, either. There is plenty of time in the bush for anything.

ISOLATED LIFE

Men with decided convictions are inclined to be misunderstanding, especially so when living in isolated cabins or shacks by themselves. At that, maybe those with seemingly odd quirks are no more plentiful among a given number dwelling far from what Hardy called "The Madding Crowd" than a like number domiciled in any city block. Naturally they would meet more in areas where neighbors continue comings and goings closely and have more time to gossip about the other fellow's idiosyncrasies.

Politically Tom Grainer called himself a Liberal. He probably was, inside and out. He boasted he voted that way no matter what the issue or who the candidate. EXPLAINS A TREND

JUST why the hydraulic valve lifter, used for a number of years on several high priced cars, should now come into more general use puzzles all but those who also take note of the fact that there is more general use of hydraulic lifters. Actually it is the type of valve arrangement which more clearly demands the zero tappet clearance which these hydraulic lifters maintain. Changes in tappet clearance are the result of many complex variables and often are unpredictable, according to careful studies. This is not only because of a wide variety of engine operations, but also because of the things that happen to engines as they are in use. For instance, after going down a long grade with the throttle closed the engine will drop in temperature as much as 30 degrees. Carbon deposits, hasty back pressure, timing, mixture and the clearance between the valve stems and the guides are among the factors which affect the tappet clearance. Hydraulic lifters, when not fouled with their own special fluid, successfully overcome these conditions, and maintain that zero clearance which helps the engine behave itself.

KEEP THEM IN MIND

If the steering gear is to be checked for accuracy, always remember that a tight link, causing the drag of the wheels and complete steering assembly, will be included.

Weight was 2,400 for last year's model, 2,800 for the 1930 jobs. This about reverses popular conceptions of the trend. There is no mystery about the boost in average horsepower over the 20-year span, but while horsepower has gone up from 34 to 113 the engine really hasn't become smaller. Average displacement in 1930 was 270 cubic inches while last year the figure stood at 260. It was 264 back in 1939, 256 in 1940. Compression ratio has gone up steadily in keeping with octane rating of gasoline.

MECHANIC SPEAKING

Something to watch out for when checking into the causes of abnormal wear on tire treads is avoiding the sort of diagnosis that comes too easily. Jones was observing a bad flat spot on one of his tires. His neighbor came right up with the decision that this was due to lack of wheel and tire balance. Without further ado the car was driven to a shop, the tire repaired with a new one and the wheel and tire balanced. That seemed entirely logical, yet both men had reached the wrong conclusion into the old tire's spotty appearance. Further trouble with the new tire proved that the Brake for the particular wheel was quite erratic, and that every now and again it locked.

MORE THAN NOISE

When the optimistic friend tells you that he can cure that water pump noise by putting a little emulsifying oil into inhibitor into the cooling system his plan is always worth a try, but don't be surprised if the schemer fails to silence the pump. Something more serious than a little binding of pump parts may be the trouble. The impeller itself may be loose, for example. Or the impeller may be sheared off or broken. Emulsifying oil just inhibitor may be effective in checking a too loud pump seal or rust in the bearing, but it naturally won't have any effect on the movement of a pump shaft pump or excessive seal pump.

BOOKS

By W. T. GALT

For years one of the biggest mysteries in the whodunit literary scene was "Who Is Ellery Queen?" or, more properly, "Who Are Elerry Queen?"

For although there are still a few loose ends to tie up in "The Case of the Collaborating Cousins," it is now pretty generally known that Ellery Queen is actually Frederic Dannay and Manfred B. Lee.

Yet there is still a certain element of mystery involved in the Queen case, Jack Karr points out in a recent issue of the Toronto Star.

The mystery is simply this: How is an Ellery Queen story written? Who does what?

Does Fred Dannay sketch out the plot and leave the actual writing to his cousin, Manfred Lee? Is it the other way around? Or is it some other combination of the talents of the two men?

"No comment," Fred Dannay grinned when the Toronto Star's writer tried to pin him down.

"It's been a trade secret for years and that's the way it's going to continue to be," half of Ellery Queen said.

Still, now that the cousins' real names are known, it's not as big a trade secret as it used to be.

For at one time both Dannay and Lee were darting around the country on lecture tours. They both wore black masks.

Lee called himself Ellery Queen and Dannay called himself Barnaby Ross, another of their pseudonyms, Mr. Karr reports.

The public was intrigued. There was much speculation on just who these masked marvels might be.

At one time or another, Mr. Karr recalls, it was "reliably reported" that one or other of the team was S. S. Van Dine, Alexander Woollcott or even Thomas E. Dewey.

"We had ourselves a whale of a time," Dannay told Karr. "We'd challenge each other as writers of detective fiction and debate ourselves hoarse on a lecture platform. Nobody guessed that we were both Ellery Queen and Barnaby Ross, and it made for a lot of good fun."

That part of the masquerade was dropped some time ago, at about the same time Barnaby Ross' by-line began to disappear. Dannay and Lee admitted that they were Ellery Queen, the urbane solvers of crimes.

They were the boys who parlayed a luncheon table conversation into a whopping big business that has brought them both wealth and fame.

By the end of this year, some 60 books—including novels, collections of sort stories and anthologies—will have been published under Ellery's name.

They estimate that they have reached more than 25,000,000 readers in the United States and Canada, and 15,000,000 in non-English-speaking countries.

And, of course, there are a few millions more who have seen Queen movies, television shows, heard Queen radio programs or even read the Ellery Queen magazine.

The New York Times reports that R. Carlyle Buley, whose "The Old Northwest" has just been warded the Pulitzer Prize, had no easier a time than many another author in getting his book published.

The book was originally to be published by a prominent New York publisher who later turned it down. The book finally had to be subsidized by the Eli Lilly Foundation.

Lucky: The Famous Foundling.

Lucky, 'Just Dog,' Finds Place In Hearts Of Nation

"Lucky, the Famous Foundling," text by Ray Mackland, photos by Nina Leen (Copp, Clark, $2.50).

An appealing pooch who was born lucky is the real-life subject of this pictorial biography.

Life printed the foundling's picture and within hours the pup was Cinderella-ed to fame.

Now, two years later, Lucky bids fair to become the pin-up heroine of the National Tail-Waggers' Clubs, for over 100 irresistible pictures, tracing her rags-to-riches career have been collected by her owner. Life photographer Nina Leen. The pictures spun together by a text.

The heroine is "just dog," but a cuter one would be hard to find. In fact, a better book gift for dog-lovers will be just as hard to find.—M.D.G.

Culbertson Brings Order Out Of Canasta's Chaos

"The Culbertson System of Canasta and Samba," by Ely Culbertson (Winston, $2).

"Official Canasta Laws," compiled by National Canasta Laws Commissions of U.S.A. and Argentina (Winston, 60 cents).

"Canasta has been in a state of hopeless confusion," Mr. Culbertson writes. "Like contract bridge it is essentially a partnership game."

Yet he declares, partnership co-operation is needed and this is impossible without partnership information.

Mr. Culbertson has done for Canasta what he did for contract bridge some years ago—created a system. He claims that partners using his system will win against partners who do not use it if other factors (such as ability to remember cards) are approximately equal.

The authorized rules of Canasta are also now published both in an individual book (listed above) and as a supplement to Mr. Culbertson's new book.

Trees Prove Handsome In Pictorial Introduction

"A First Book of Tree Identification," by Matilda Rogers (Random House, $3).

The author wants people to be able to identify almost any tree as an old friend and this book presents a good introduction to the trees, along with easy ways to recognize them.

Using outstandingly beautiful photographs, both of over-all trees and minute detail, along with a minimum of words, she has pointed out characteristics of most common trees so that even the beginner will be able to recognize them and want to know more about them.

Besides the notes about specific trees, there is a good deal of general tree lore. Probably it is the photographs (by Wynn Hammer) that make this book the delight it is.

Delightful Book Satirizes Rich B.C. Timber Family

"The Provincials," by John Cornish (McLeod, $3.)

This highly entertaining novel is bound to fascinate most British Columbians, particularly those with a working knowledge of Vancouver.

For it is about a Vancouver timber baron and his family. Here are Vancouver places and names. And the characters here seem so real that a reader who knows Vancouver can't help but speculate just who the author had in mind while he was writing.

Readers who don't know Vancouver will probably be just as delighted by the rather affectionate satire with which Mr. Cornish has portrayed British Columbia's own brand of provincialism.

RECALLS LIFE

The hero of this book is Kenneth Menzies, who, as narrator, recalls his life with the Dunseiths — one of Vancouver's richest families.

The opening scenes of the book take place in a hilariously obnoxious private school somewhere in the Interior of the Province. It's attitude is summed up late in the book at an Old Boys' meeting when the new head declares:

"This is how I see m' job. Boys are like dogs. When a dog misbehaves I whip him. My task will be to make the boys toe the mark. The retirin' head may rest assured there will be no newfangled nonsense while I'm in the saddle. . . . Let's see (boys) less objectionable than nature made them."

DRIFT IN

After schooling like that and a spell at U.B.C., Kenneth and the Dunseith boys mostly drift into the Dunseith timber empire. But for one reason or another, by the end of the book, none of them seems to have fitted in very well.

Kenneth's love affair, with Bunty Dunseith is one of the most extraordinary affairs recounted in recent fiction.

Bunty who has laid a trap to match another man in a cabin high on Grouse Mountain, lands our hero instead, and the pair are awakened by the string section of a Symphony Orchestra playing Wagner's "Siegfried's Idyll" in the morning snow outside.

This novel, published in New York, is John Cornish's first. It is told with a gentle wit that points up an abundance of Foibles of life in British Columbia.

Being so close to the subject matter it is hard for this reviewer to assess the literary content but it does seem first rate.—W.T.G.

Colorful Canadian Life Recounted In Biography

"The Ardent Exile, the Life and Times of D'Arcy McGee," by Josephine Phelan (Macmillan, $4).

D'Arcy McGee, one of the Fathers of Confederation, emigrated to the United States from Ireland as a brash youth of 17.

Within 25 years he had become a Canadian statesman

JOSEPHINE PHELAN

Then, at 42, he was shot down in an Ottawa street to become Canada's first political martyr.

Miss Phelan presents a clear picture of the Irish rebel poet, orator and statesman along with a worthable background of the times in which the silver-tongued Irishman lived.

This sympathetic portrait shows McGee as a man who visualized a great future for a united and independent Canada but who was brought down, possibly because of his strong beliefs, before he could see his dream completed.

This is the first book by Miss Phelan, a librarian in the Toronto Public Libraries. It is a competent piece of work about a colorful Canadian figure.

Brims Are Sweeping Wide On Newest Summer Hats

By ANNE YATES CLARKE

ABOUT the time a young man's fancy turns to love, a girl begins to think of a hat to spur that fancy. Tradition has it that a wide brim will often catch his eye, and this year the milliners are adding their sanction by designing some of the prettiest broad-brimmed hats that we've ever had. They range from the very chic plain flat sailor to flower hats.

To be smart this year prints must be different, as is illustrated by this pure silk dress. The soft line is defined with clarity and simplicity. The neckline is a wonderful foil for flattering jewelry, the slim dress has a motion that is entirely feminine. In exquisite color combinations of white turquoise, with yellow, pink, navy or black.

Between the extremes are many wearable cartwheels, circular and straight or dipped, and capelines that are wider at the sides than front and back. Some are irregular, some symmetrical, some are trimmed, some rely on their texture, color and perhaps a wisp of veiling for their interest. Because the big hat has been done so generally by all milliners you will find that there is definite variety.

Not all the big hats come in the designer class, of course. The manufacturers who make medium and low-priced hats have created scores of them, varied and attractive. Some can be worn with suits or simple daytime clothes, others are definitely for garden parties or the cocktail hour.

Hats in the wider shapes are mostly of straw, though you will find some very smart ones of velvet, lovely for weddings and for very dress-up occasions. Fabric makes casual hats for wear with semi-sports and tailored costumes too. The straws are sometimes lacy and open so that they cast pretty shadows across the face. Flowers such as lilacs or lilies of the valley used flat or held between layers of veiling make some of the most beautiful big hats. Others, and very new they are, come in starched lace, or they are done in layers of tulle or veiling drawn over a wire frame.

REFUGEES

Sad, indeed, is the plight of refugees! Can one possibly picture them? Forlorn, unhappy people, gathering together a handful of goods: perhaps a trifle of food, a blanket and their warmest clothing, and whatever treasures would be portable; an heirloom or two, maybe—and then they leave behind them a home and possessions to which they may never return. The poor, as almost always, suffer most; with no means of conveyance their naturally slow progress is further retarted by their personal impedimenta.

We, who take pride in our homes and belongings, can give them our sympathy, but how can we fortunate people understand their suffering?

And this is only a small sketch of refugees—victims of war or revolution or other national calamity.

How fervently we all hope and pray that such a fate may never be ours! That we may never have to "trek" in tragic misery with no prospective destination. God forbid!

* * *

And yet, you know, after all, are we not all refugees? "Indeed," you may skeptically say, "how, and in what way?" If we substitute the word "escapees" for its synonym, "refugees," we shall arrive at some understanding, for which of us is there who would not gladly escape (or find refuge) from our own pitiful inadequacies, our foolishness, our ineptitudes, misunderstandings, negligences, our intolerable burden of mistakes and oversights? But—why be refugees? Why not fight and overcome, or at least endeavor to subdue these crushing, harrowing personal annoyances? That would be one angle of "fighting the good fight."

In a land where Love and Mercy have tenaciously followed us, where (comfort and plenty (should I add luxury?) have been our lot, where our homes have remained intact, even sacrosanct, how grateful we should be for such Favor, and how compassionate and kindly we should be towards the afflicted and oppressed.

New Stylings . . .

—a shawl quilted along its flower pattern and draped in handkerchief points over a ruffled petticoat. An off-shoulder blouse completes the costume.

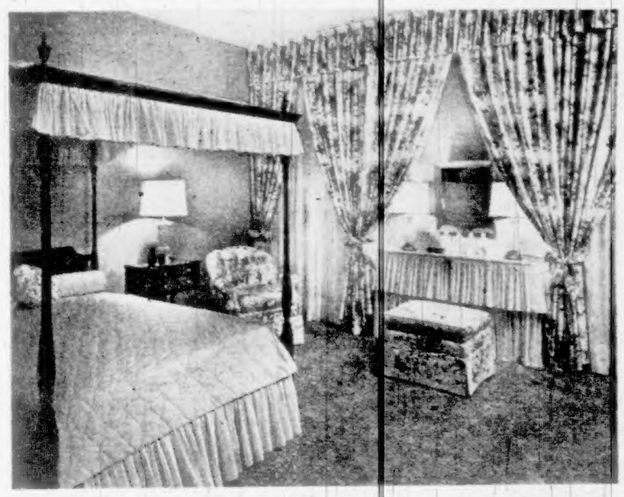
—"garter" sleeves which may be slipped on or off with the strapless evening dress. Wear only one if you want that new symmetrical look.

On the Fashion Beam . . .

Cloky is the American spelling for the French word, "cloque," and regardless of how you spell it the meaning is the same—blistered. A small figure that is raised irregularly and which gives the feeling of matelasse (which most of us know from upholstery fabrics) is found in some of the newer pique weaves this year. It is an attractive fabric in keeping with the surface interest in all fabrics at this time and designers are showing it in everything from trim bathing suits to informal summer separates.

Traditional For The Bedroom



By BETTY LENAHAN

An air of quiet elegance and simple dignity can be easily achieved in a traditional bedroom by a carefuly planned color scheme, wise selection of furniture, floor covering, draperies and other decorative accessories.

To keep the atmosphere of the room in the spirit of the times, the background is the first consideration. The walls can be painted, preferably a pastel shade, or there is a wide selection of wallpaper patterns such as toiles, scenics and floral designs ideally suited as backgrounds for the beautifully designed delicate 18th century furniture.

The floor covering can either be a solid color or there is a choice of beautiful floral patterns suitable for this type decor.

Fabrics such as chintz, taffeta, brocade and damask offer varied possibilities for draperies, bedspreads, upholstery and vanity skirts. Here, instead of the usual suite, odd pieces of furniture can be used most effectively.

FRESH AND COOL

Fresh and cool as a spring morning is the very feminine bedroom illustrated. The beautiful 18th century mahogany furniture, though simple in design, gives the room a feeling of charm and dignity.

The walls and carpet are the lovely soft green of tulip leaves. One wall, cleverly treated to give the impression of an entire wall of windows, has white batiste curtains and draperies of a delightful white chintz with birds, butterflies, birds' nests and flowers in pink, turquoise and green. These are tied back with great bows of the chintz and a knife pleated matching chintz valance is effectively used across the top of the entire unit. A dressing table, placed in the centre, has a two-tiered knife pleated skirt of white chintz.

The tester top bed has dust ruffle and tester ruffle of white chintz and the spread is quilted pink shantung. Two mahogany chests, night tables, chintz covered chair and ottoman which also serves as a dressing table bench, complete the furnishings.

The lamps and other decorative accessories are leaf green and opaque Bristol glass adding notes of authenticity to the period of the room.

Tips for Teens

By ELINOR WILLIAMS

Did you know:

—A soap-and-water scrub every morning and night is the best road to a clear, smooth complexion? For thorough but gentle cleansing, use a shaving brush, a small sponge or a soft-bristled complexion brush to apply mild soap suds with a light, circular motion. Rinse with warm, then cool, water.

—Oily skin is caused by over-active oil glands during glandular changes in the early teens? Your skin is oily if it's often moist and shiny. This extra oil clogs the pores if it isn't removed carefully with soap and water. During the day when your skin gets oily, "blot" it with a tissue or clean handkerchief . . . until you can wash it.

—Blackheads are pore-openings of the skin that are filled with dirt and excess oil? To remove blackheads, rinse your face with warm water and dry it. Covering clean fingers with a tissue, gently press fingertips at each side of the blackhead. Never squeeze blackheads, for this injures and scars the skin. Apply an antiseptic afterward to prevent infection.

—The best way to prevent blackheads is with frequent soap and water washing? They show that your daily face-cleansing isn't frequent enough or thorough enough to keep the pore-openings unclogged and clean.

—When blackheads become infected, they're called pimples. Best treatment for pimples, besides keeping your face clean, clean, clean, is a medicated overnight ointment that helps heal them quickly.

Women's Work

* * *

By HELEN HALE

KEEP a small magnet in your sewing box to use for picking up pins and needles that fall to the floor while sewing. This is much easier than stooping to get them one by one.

Silk and sheer materials will not pucker while you run them through the sewing machine if you place tissue paper underneath them while sewing. The paper is pulled off easily after the stitching is done.

To make even hems, cut a piece of cardboard the size of the hem and use it as a marker, slipping the card in as you hem, and moving it along as you work.

Lace curtains can be mended easily if they're starched, and a piece of starched lace pressed to the hole which the curtains are very damp. If desired, you may catch the hole with the mending piece in several places with fine thread and small stitches.

Scissors which are not too dull can be sharpened at home by cutting several strips of sandpaper with them.

Large holes in stockings can be darned by cutting a piece of mosquito netting and darning it to the stocking until the hole is covered.

Stitches will not slip off your knitting needles if you push a cork on the needles when you finish knitting.

Keep the Forests Green

No. 1—Cigarette butts tossed out of car windows often start forest fires. The Canadian Forestry Association says: "Do not throw butts out of car windows. USE THAT ASH-TRAY. Last year Canada lost 2,600,000 acres of forest to fire.

No. 2—After you think your campfire is out, feel it with your hand to make double sure. Runaway campfires caused 16% of all the disastrous forest fires in Canada last year, according to the Canadian Forestry Association.

No. 3—The Canadian Forestry Association says if you smoke in the bush, sit down and finish your cigaret. Before picking up the trail again, stub your butt out on a rock, or throw it in water. Careless smokers are charged with blame for 1,152 forest fires in Canada last year.

No. 4—Campers who didn't put out their campfires caused 1,138 forest fires last year, according to the Canadian Forestry Association. If you make a campfire, build it near water, build it on rock, keep it small, and POUR LOTS OF WATER ON IT WHEN YOU LEAVE.

No. 5—To put out a pipe in the woods, clear a patch down to bare earth, then stamp out the hotspot. Enjoy your smoke, then be sure it's out! The Association says these fires can and must be completely eliminated.

No. 6—If you observe all of the above rules you will help to achieve the result shown in this picture. Big trees that can be cut into lumber to supply the markets of the world and to bring added capital to the Province of British Columbia.
